WASHINGTON.

Protracted Debate in the Senate on the Suffrage Amendment.

The Supplementary Banking Bill Killed in the House.

Further Debate on the Proposition to Reduce the Army.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The Constitutional Amendment came up in the Senate to-day on motion of Senator STEWART, who moved that the Senate recede and concur in the House bill. This question was divided, and the motion to recede was carried, but the one to concur was lost. This brought up the original proposition of the Senate Judiciary Committee, when there followed the old arguments and amendments, which were made and offered, and voted down eight or ten days ago when it was under discussion in the Senate. Innumerable speeches were made on the various propositions. Senator CONKLING made a strong, sarcastic speech, full of force and point, against the Judiciary Committee amendment, on the ground that it was wholly inadequate to the object proposed to be reached. It is now 11 o'clock P. M. The Senate has been in continuous session since 12 o'clock, and the final vote appears almost as far off as ever.

DEBATE ON THE BANK BILL.

The House was engaged all day on the Supplementary Bank bill, and a very lively contest took place on the fourth section, which proposed a redistribution of the currency. The section was first amended so as to except banks with less than $200,000 capital from the scaling process, which met with the approval of the Committee on Banking. Then a great variety of amendments were voted upon, but all rejected until the amendment of Mr. CONOVER was reached, which proposed to make the redistribution upon the basis of property and population. This was carried by the Western and Southern members voting together, in the belief that they would thereby get a larger share than under the Committee's amendment. But in refusing to take what they could get, by attempting to get more, they lost all. The adoption of CONOVER's amendment made the bill objectionable to its original friends, and when Mr. INGERSOLL proposed as a substitute to sections 3 and 4 several new sections, virtually opening the whole national system to free banking, they were agreed to by a large majority, simply for the purpose of defeating the bill. The next motion was to lay the bill on the table, which prevailed—yeas 92, nays 78. Pending a motion to reconsider this vote, the House took a recess until evening. The bill is practically dead for this session.

THE REDUCTION OF THE ARMY.

Gen. BUTLER opened the debate in the House this evening, on the Army Appropriation bill, with a characteristic speech in favor of his sweeping amendment, which aims at total reorganization of the military service. He proposes that the grade of General shall be abolished after the 4th of March next; that of Lieutenant-General as soon as a vacancy shall occur; that brevets shall be conferred only for distinguished service in the presence of the enemy; that after July next there shall be only three Major-Generals and five Brigadier-Generals, and twenty-four regiments of infantry, six regiments of cavalry and three regiments of artillery. Mr. BUTLER stated, in his speech this evening, that the adoption of this amendment would save the country $7,425,000 in the pay of officers alone, and reduce in the aggregate the expenses of the military establishment from sixty-eight millions and some hundreds of thousands of dollars to thirty-three millions of dollars. Mr. SHELLABARGER followed in a short speech in opposition. He thought that we had better follow the advice of Gen. GRANT in reference to this question, namely, a gradual reduction, to which Gen. BUTLER demurred. The debate dragged on for an hour longer, when the House adjourned without taking any action on any of the amendments. The feeling among members appears to be averse to the wholesale onslaught of Gen. BUTLER on the army, and there is not much probability that his extreme views on the question will be adopted by Congress at least during the present session.

GEN. GRANT AND PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

The stickters for official etiquette appear to be unduly annoyed and irritated at the announcement that Gen. GRANT does not intend to ride with President JOHNSON to the Capitol on Inauguration Day, as has been customary in the case of outgoing and incoming Presidents. Should Gen. GRANT see fit to adopt this course, he can refer to at least one precedent in the history of the Government. When JACKSON arrived in this city in 1829, the then President, Mr. ADAMS, refused to hold any intercourse with Gen. JACKSON on account of the Mrs. Eaton scandal, and on the morning of the 4th of March, when JACKSON was sworn into office, Mr. ADAMS, instead of going to the Capitol, went from the executive mansion to a private dwelling. Gen. JACKSON rode to the Capitol alone and Mr. ADAMS took no part in the ceremonies.

SENATOR BAYARD AND W. W. CORCORAN.

The Senate Committee on the District of Columbia resumed, this morning, the investigation of the claim of W. W. CORCORAN, Esq., DORIZON, formerly steward to Mr. BODISCO, the Russian Minister, who is charged with having heard certain statements made by Senator BAYARD and Mr. CORCORAN relative to the assassination of President LINCOLN, appeared before the Committee, but refused to testify, claiming his diplomatic privilege, and was allowed to depart. Senator BAYARD and Mr. CORCORAN both appeared before the Committee voluntarily and contradicted the testimony of the negro servant who testified before the Committee a few days since that he had heard Messrs. CORCORAN and BAYARD signify their willingness to pay any one who would assassinate Mr. LINCOLN. Both of these gentlemen pronounce the whole thing a fabrication and without a vestige of truth. Dr. SAMUEL MILLER and the correspondent of the New-York Tribune were also examined by the Committee. The Committee will meet again on Friday morning and resume the investigation of the claim.

THE NEW TAX BILL.

The Tax bill, which was pushed through the House last night, will make six hundred pages when engrossed, and is the longest bill ever passed by Congress. It was ordered to be sent to the Senate at once, though it will occupy the Engrossing Clerks until Saturday. It seems practically impossible that it should be acted upon in the Senate, yet it is understood that Gen. SCHENCK is not without hope. It will be a matter of sincere regret if the great labor of the Committee and the House is lost upon this measure simply for want of time.

A DEMOCRATIC MANŒUVRE.

The Democrats played a quiet yet useless game in the House to-day. It was reported that, as soon as the Bank bill was concluded, Mr. BOUTWELL would report from the Reconstruction Committee a bill providing a Provisional Government for the State of Mississippi, and would push it through, so that it might reach the President in time to compel him to veto and return it this session, as anything that passes after Friday he can smother by putting it in his pocket. There were a great many amendments offered to the Bank bill, and the Democrats united in demanding the yeas and nays on each, thus prolonging for the whole afternoon, what could have been otherwise finished in an hour. It was a useless waste of time.

THE RECONSTRUCTION OF VIRGINIA.

The subject of the reconstruction of Virginia has been under discussion in the Senate Judiciary Committee for some days past and a report may be expected next week. No definite conclusion has yet been reached on the subject, but the feeling of the Committee appears to be in favor of submitting the Underwood Constitution, with certain changes, to the people.

THE TENURE-OF-OFFICE BILL.

The Tenure-of Office bill did not come up in the Senate to-day any further than the announcement in reference to it by Senator EDMUNDS that he desired to have it considered during the present week. There is an understanding among Senators that it shall be taken up on Saturday, when an effort will be made to pass the House bill repealing it.

THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, who had under consideration the credentials of H. V. C. MILLER, as Senator elect from Georgia, reported to-day adversely on his admission, for the reasons given in the report of the same Committee on the question of the reconstruction of Georgia, about twelve days ago.

THE MONEY LOAN BILL.

The bill to prevent National Banks from loaning money on currency collaterals was signed in both Houses to-day, and will reach the President to-morrow and be signed at once.

SPEAKER COLFAX TO RESIGN.

As it is necessary that the Vice-President elect shall be sworn into office before noon of the day of inauguration, in order that he may call the Senate to order and swear in the new Senators, it is understood that Speaker COLFAX will deliver his valedictory to the House, and resign a day or two in advance. The House will therefore have to select a Speaker for the balance of the session, which choice will undoubtedly fall upon Hon. T. M. POMEROY, of New-York, who, besides being an excellent presiding officer, will in no wise conflict with the canvass now going on for the Speakership of the next Congress, as he is not reflected.

SICKNESS OF MR. WASHBURNE.

Hon. E. B. WASHBURNE is lying very ill at his residence, and his friends entertain serious apprehensions for his recovery. In all probability he will not be able to resume his seat again in Congress at this session, and perhaps not at all. In his absence Mr. BLAINE becomes acting Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and general manager of its business before the House.

GEN. GRANT AND BADEAU.

The report in the New-York Herald of to-day about a difficulty between Gen. GRANT and Gen. BADEAU, resulting in a rupture of their relations, is pure invention. The story rests upon no other foundation than the transfer of Gen. BADEAU's desk from one room to another at army headquarters, without any change whatever of duties.

GENS. GRANT AND BUTLER.

Gen. and Mrs. GRANT called on Gen. BUTLER to-day.

INAUGURATION VISITORS.

A great many prominent people are gathering here from all quarters, though the crowd is not so great as on previous like occasions. Among the recent arrivals from New-York are: Gov. FENTON, the Senator elect; Hon. WM. A. DARLING, Gen. PHILIP S. CROOKER, W. B. ASTOR and J. J. ASTOR, Jr.

THE NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Unexpectedly to many the Conference report on the Naval Appropriation bill was agreed to in the Senate to-day. The point made against it, to the effect that new legislation could not be introduced by a Conference Committee, having failed, it will probably pass the House, and the features as telegraphed in these dispatches last night will stand as law.

A RACING ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of some prominent citizens of Washington was held last night at the St. James Hotel, for the purpose of forming an organization perfecting arrangements for a Spring meeting of race horses at the National race course near this city. Among those present were Col. CHARLES M. ALEXANDER, City Postmaster; Col. SPEAR, of Philadelphia; Major A. C. RICHARDS, Col. MASSEY and Dr. HAYS. At 7:30 Mr. GEORGE W. BUNKER was chosen Chairman, and stated the object for which the meeting was called. The name of the Association was fixed as the National Fair Association of the District of Columbia, after which Col. CHARLES M. ALEXANDER was elected President.

FORTIETH CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

MEMORIALS AND PETITIONS.

Mr. CONKLING presented a petition for the recognition of the Constitution, so as to recognize Almighty God. Also a petition for the modification of Naturalization laws. Also a remonstrance of 5 wool-growers' association in New-York State, against the renewal of the Reciprocity Treaty.

Mr. POMEROY presented several petitions for equal suffrage, and one praying for an amendment to the Constitution, so as to recognize Almighty God.

GEN. GRANT AND BRADY'S WAR VIEWS.

Mr. WILSON presented a memorial asking the Government to purchase Mr. BRADY's collection of war views.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. POMEROY, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported, with amendments, the bill granting a right of way to the Memphis, El Paso and Pacific Railroad and Telegraph Company, from El Paso, Texas, to the Pacific Ocean. The bill authorizes the Company to construct a road between the points named, to connect with other Pacific Railroads, but grants no sections of public lands.

Mr. TIPTON, from the same Committee, reported with amendments a bill granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad from Sioux City, Iowa, to Columbus, Nebraska. It grants alternate sections on each side in the State of Nebraska, for the benefit of the road.

THE EXECUTIVE MANSION.

Mr. POMEROY, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported adversely to the bill to purchase a site for an Executive Mansion, and the Committee were discharged from its further consideration; also favorably the House bill to establish a Police Court for the District of Columbia, on which he asked immediate action, but

Mr. HENDRICKS objected.

THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE.

Mr. STEWART, from the Judiciary Committee, reported adversely on Mr. SUMNER's bill to strike out the word "white" from the Naturalization laws the word "white" wherever it occurs.

Mr. CONKLING, from the same Committee, reported adversely to Mr. SUMNER's bill to regulate prosecutions for embezzling and kindred offences.

Mr. STEWART, from the same Committee, reported the credentials of H. V. MILLER as Senator elect from Georgia, with a resolution that he be not allowed to take his seat.

THE LAST AMNESTY PROCLAMATION.

Mr. EDMUNDS, from the same Committee, submitted a report on the President's message regarding his Christmas Amnesty Proclamation, accompanied with a resolution "that in the opinion of the Senate, the proclamation of the President of the United States of the 25th of December, 1868, purporting to grant general pardon and amnesty to all persons guilty of treason and acts of hostility to the United States during the late rebellion, with restoration of rights, &c., &c., was not authorized by the Constitution or laws."

Mr. HENDRICKS stated that he disagreed with the majority of the Committee, and would express his views when the report came up for action.

THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported with amendments the House bill to restrict and regulate the franking privilege.

The bill as amended provides that it shall not be lawful for any officer of the Government, member of Congress, or other person entitled by law to the franking privilege, to exercise said privilege otherwise than by his or her written or authorized signature upon the matter franked, except heads of Departments and heads of Bureaus now authorized by law to the franking privilege, who shall be allowed to frank all official mail matter pertaining to their Bureaus or Departments by the signature which shall designate the office from which it is sent, under such regulations as the Postmaster-General shall prescribe; and all letters or packages not matter of official business franked shall be charged with the rates of postage which may be hereafter established by law.

ARAUCA FUR.

Mr. NYE presented a remonstrance of citizens of San Francisco against the passage of the pending bill to protect the fur-bearing animals of Alaska.

REDUCTION OF THE NAVY.

On motion of Mr. DRAKE the report of the Committee of Conference upon the bill to amend the various acts relating to the navy was taken up.

Mr. GRIMES explained the bill, and said it was designed to make great reduction in the size and expense of the navy, and especially the Marine Corps.

Messrs. EDMUNDS and DAVIS criticised the report of the Committee of Conference, as introducing new matter not contained in the original bill; and the latter objected to it upon the ground that it provided for no great reduction of the Marine Corps.

Mr. GRIMES said that he was in favor of reducing the Marine Corps still further. He saw no reason why it should be now any larger than before the war.

The report was agreed to.

REVENUE FRAUDS.

A resolution was adopted directing the Attorney-General to furnish a list of persons convicted of violating the Revenue laws, with the fines and other punishments imposed on them, and the numbers and dates of the pardons given to such persons by the President.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, Monday, the 22d inst., was set apart for the consideration of business from the Committee on Finance; and on motion of Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, Saturday next was set apart for the consideration of his bill to regulate naturalization.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

Mr. STEWART moved to take up the message of the House, asking the Committee of Conference in regard to the Constitutional Amendment. Carried.

Mr. STEWART moved that the Senate insist on its amendments and agree to a Committee of Conference.

Mr. WILLIAMS said that when there was a difference between the House and the Senate in regard to the Military Reconstruction bill, a Committee of Conference had been proposed, but objected to by many Senators, on the ground that it was too important a subject to be dealt with by a Committee; but he thought that the same objection applied with greater force to intrusting this more important matter to a Committee of Conference.

Mr. BUCKALEW also thought the subject too important to have the difference in regard to it settled by such a Committee.

Mr. STEWART withdrew his motion to insist, and moved that the Senate recede and agree to the amendment made in the House.

Mr. BUCKALEW continued his remarks in the course of which he said that it is plainly seen that of late years, in which there has been a disagreement between the Houses and the Senate in regard to any measure of a political character the House, or rather the man who controlled the House, had always at last had the matter his own way. Mr. BUCKALEW was proceeding at length, when Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, raised the point of order that Mr. STEWART's motion was not a privileged motion, and as the morning hour had already expired, the unfinished business of yesterday came next in order.

The President said he would submit the question to the Senate, but Mr. MORRILL withdrew the point of order.

Mr. THURMAN asked whether the bill to reorganize the Penitentiary, which had been set down for 1 o'clock, did not come next in order?

Mr. FESSENDEN—I suppose that we are going to have such a scene as we had yesterday, [referring to a confused discussion about the order of business.]

Mr. THURMAN—I do not rise to discuss the point, but merely to make an inquiry of the Chair.

The President decided the hour appointed for consideration of Judiciary having passed the bill lost its place.

Mr. BUCKALEW resumed the floor and made an argument to show the great importance of the amendment of last year of the Constitutional Amendment providing, "That Congress shall have power to prescribe the mode of choosing electors for President and Vice-President."

Mr. CAMERON said, that every one knew that Gen. FREMONT had been cheated out of the vote of Pennsylvania in the Republican Party, and last Fall Philadelphia had been cheated fraudulently by the same party. He believed that Pennsylvania was no worse than other States, and whatever wrongs she had done in this respect had been done by her Democratic brethren. He was in favor of adhering to the proposition of his colleague, which, if adopted, would allow the party in power, before a Presidential election, to gerrymander the States for its own benefit.

Mr. EDMUNDS spoke briefly against Mr. BUCKALEW's proposition. He agreed with Mr. CAMERON that so far as it would change the present mode of choosing Electors, it would give the party having a majority in Congress on the eve of a Presidential election, power to arrange the mode of choosing the electors in each State so as to preserve its own ascendency. It was also in direct conflict with the design of the Constitution, which was, that the President should be elected by the States, and not directly by the people of the whole country.

Mr. WILSON said he would vote against the motion of the Senator from Nevada (Mr. STEWART.) He had been left early in the session Congress would have matured an amendment securing to all citizens of the United States an equal right to vote and hold office. But the first part of the session had been allowed to pass without action on the subject, and when the House had sent to the Senate a far more important proposition than which the Senate had substituted a more comprehensive one, he regretted that the House had refused to agree to the Senate amendment; but now fearing the danger of delay he was willing to vote for the House proposition if it could be amended so as to secure to colored citizens the right to hold office as well as the right to vote.

Mr. CONKLING inquired of the Chair what the pending motion of the Senator from Nevada was.

The President replied that it was merely a motion to recede from the Senate amendments.

Mr. CONKLING said that he would as soon recede and concur in the House proposition.

Mr. CONKLING said that it would be better if the motion were as stated by the Chair, because the Senate could recede by a majority vote, while it would require a two-thirds vote to concur in the House proposition. The motion ought to be divided.

Mr. STEWART said he did not care to have the Senate recede unless it also concurred. He feared that unless the amendments were adopted now it would fall for the session.

Mr. HOWARD, according to statute parliamentary law the Senate, by receding from its own amendments, would adopt the House proposition.

After a brief but confused discussion of rules, and the effect of a vote to recede, the President asked Mr. STEWART (in the absence of Mr. SHERMAN) to state explicitly what his motion was.

Mr. STEWART—My motion is to recede from the amendments made to the House proposition by the Senate, and to agree to the House proposition.

Mr. SHERMAN—I call for a division on the question.

Mr. POMEROY—After we vote to recede.

Mr. SHERMAN—Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof."

Mr. HENDRICKS—I do not choose to adopt that view. If it is the disposition of this body that a vote to recede passes the original measure, we ought to know it now.

Mr. MORTON—Is it possible that a vote to recede from a proposition entirely different from that of the House is to be regarded as a vote accepting the proposition of the House?

Mr. HENDRICKS—It is not a question of possibility. It is a question of law, and I understand that it has been found possible to make, in this way, a great many laws which stand on the statute books now.

On motion of Mr. STEWART, the order for a recess was rescinded.

There was further discussion of the question whether a vote to recede from the Senate amendments would be in effect a concurrence in the House proposition.

Mr. HENDRICKS asked the Chair to decide the question.

The President submitted the question to the Senate in this form: In the opinion of the Senate, will a vote to recede pass the bill? And it was decided in the negative.

The Senate then receded from its amendments to the original House proposition by the following vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Anthony, Cameron, Cattell, Chandler, Cole, Conkling, Corbett, Cragin, Drake, Edmunds, Ferry, Fessenden, Frelinghuysen, Harris, Howard, Howe, Morgan, Morrill of Maine, Morrill of Vermont, Morton, Patterson of New-Hampshire, Pomeroy, Pool, Ramsey, Ross, Sherman, Stewart, Sumner, Thayer, Trumbull, Van Winkle, Wade, Willey, Williams, Yates—35.

NAYS—Messrs. Abbott, Buckalew, Davis, Dixon, Doolittle, Edmunds, Fowler, Grimes, Hendricks, McCreery, Morton, Osborn, Patterson of Pennsylvania, Pomeroy, Rice, Saulsbury, Sprague, Stewart, Sumner, Thayer, Vickers, Warner, Welch, Wilson, Wilson—21.

Mr. STEWART then moved to proceed with the consideration of the Constitutional Amendment reported from the Judiciary Committee, as follows:

"The rights of citizens of the United States to vote and hold office shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

Mr. WILLIAMS—I move that the Senate adjourn. [Cries of "No! no!" and confusion.]

Mr. STEWART—I will call for the yeas and nays on every motion to adjourn. I call for them on this motion.

The Senate refused to adjourn—yeas 21, nays 32.

Mr. STEWART's motion was then carried, and the amendment reported from the Judiciary Committee was before the Senate.

Mr. NYE expressed the hope that it would not be adopted, and that the Senate would not consume much time in the discussion of it. Much time had been occupied in discussing the propositions to give the colored man the right of suffrage, but he was now satisfied that it had been wasted, because it was apparent that no amendment could be agreed to so long as professed friends of the measure voted with its enemies, merely because their own whims were not adopted by the majority. For years the two Senators from Massachusetts had talked eloquently about the right of the negro to vote and the power and protection the ballot would give him, but now they came from the House a resolution proposing to give the negro the right, the Senator from Massachusetts (SUMNER,) voted "No." [Very loud laughter.] The same was true of the other Senator from Massachusetts, (WILSON,) and of the Senator from Kansas, (POMEROY,) who had grown gray and bald in demanding the ballot for the negro. [Laughter.] Such being the course of the oldest and loudest champions of negro suffrage in the Senate he (NYE) was opposed to spending further time in the consideration of propositions to amend the Constitution in this respect, and would vote henceforth during the session if they (the men who made old Constitution alone) and attend to the pressing practical questions demanding the attention of the Senate.

Mr. WELCH, on the contrary, not only hoped that the resolution would pass, but also that a great deal of time would be occupied in discussing it.

Mr. HOWARD, as before, opposed the resolution of the Judiciary Committee for several reasons, the chief one being that by implication it left it in the power of Congress to say that none but members of some particular religious sect should hold office.

Mr. DRAKE again offered his amendment in these words:

"No citizen of the United States shall, on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude, be denied the right to vote or hold office."

This, he thought, was better than the Judiciary Committee's proposition, because it avoided the implication contained in the latter that the right to vote was a natural right.

The amendment was rejected.

Many other amendments were offered and voted down.

Mr. NYE moved to strike out all after the enacting clause, and substitute the amendment as it came from the House, and expressed his belief that unless the amendment were carried, the Constitutional Amendment would fail altogether.

Mr. ROSCOE—Why?

Mr. NYE—Because you cannot get votes enough for it. [Laughter.]

Mr. ROSCOE—Won't you vote for it?

Mr. NYE—No, sir. I will not vote for it because I believe it will be fully open to criticism, and will be defeated in almost every State.

Mr. WILSON briefly vindicated himself from the charge of inconsistency made by Mr. NYE, and insisted that his action on this subject now was entirely consistent with his previous words and actions in regard to it.

Mr. HOWARD renewed the offer of his substitute, as follows:

"Citizens of African descent shall have the same right to vote and hold office in the States and Territories as other citizens."

Mr. SAULSBURY suggested that the annoyance and trouble caused to Congress, by the mistake of the Almighty in making distinctions of color had recently been more effectually obviated by abolishing these distinctions than he (Mr. HOWARD) thought they should not be regarded. It might be provided by one sweeping amendment, that all men should be of one color, say blue—[laughter]—and that there should be no distinction between the sexes, and then those disturbing questions which occupied Congress night and day would be settled wholly to the practical interests of a great people, blue and without sex. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOWARD's motion was lost—yeas 22, nays 27.

Mr. HENDRICKS offered an amendment like that offered in the previous discussion by Mr. BUCKALEW, providing that the constitutional amendment should be submitted for ratification to the Legislatures, the most numerous branches of which should be elected after the adoption of the amendment by Congress. He thought that if the Republican Party wished to keep its faith with the people, it would not object to this.

The amendment was lost—yeas 12, nays 40.

Mr. DIXON again offered the proposition that the amendment should be submitted for ratification to Conventions instead of State Legislatures. Lost.

Mr. VICKERS offered an amendment providing that no person should be denied the right of suffrage because of participation in the late insurrection, unless actually convicted of treason. Lost.

The report of the Senate Judiciary Committee was then adopted by the following vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Abbott, Chandler, Cole, Conkling, Cragin, Drake, Edmunds, Ferry, Frelinghuysen, Harris, Howard, Howe, Morgan, Morrill of Maine, Morrill of Vermont, Morton, Osborn, Patterson of New-Hampshire, Pomeroy, Pool, Ramsey, Ross, Robertson, Sherman, Sprague, Stewart, Thayer, Van Winkle, Wade, Warner, Welch, Willey, Williams, Wilson—35.

NAYS—Messrs. Bayard, Buckalew, Davis, Fowler, Hendricks, McCreery, Norton, Patterson of Tennessee, Saulsbury, Sherman, Sprague, Vickers, Wade, Warner, Wilson—11.

Mr. WILSON moved to agree to the House proposition amended so as to secure to colored citizens the right to hold office as well as the right to vote.

The amendment was ruled out of order.

Mr. SAULSBURY and Mr. SAWYER opposed the House proposition as entirely inadequate, and said their colored constituents would rather have nothing than this.

Mr. MORTON thought it best to reconsider the vote by which the Senate had receded from its amendments, and then to appoint a Committee of Conference, which could meet the House Committee at 1 o'clock to-morrow, and agree upon an amendment, which could be at once passed. He therefore moved to reconsider the vote receding.

Mr. HENDRICKS said he understood the eagerness of his colleague to get the amendment passed without delay, so that it could be submitted to the existing Legislatures, and not to the people of the States. But his colleague was mistaken if he thought that a Committee of Conference could so shape the amendment that it would be adopted without debate.

Mr. MORTON's motion was lost—yeas 22, nays 24.

The Senate then refused to concur in the House proposition by the following vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Anthony, Cameron, Cattell, Chandler, Conkling, Cragin, Drake, Ferry, Fessenden, Harris, Howard, Howe, Morgan, Morrill of Maine, Morrill of Vermont, Morton, Pool, Pomeroy, Ross, Sherman, Sprague, Stewart, Sumner, Thayer, Trumbull, Van Winkle, Wade, Williams, Yates—27. Not two-thirds.

NAYS—Messrs. Abbott, Bayard, Buckalew, Davis, Dixon, Doolittle, Edmunds, Fowler, Grimes, Hendricks, McCreery, Morton, Osborn, Patterson of Pennsylvania, Pomeroy, Rice, Robertson, Saulsbury, Sawyer, Spencer, Sumner, Thayer, Vickers, Warner, Welch, Willey, Wilson—21.

Mr. STEWART then moved to proceed with the consideration of the Constitutional Amendment reported from the Judiciary Committee, as follows:

"The rights of citizens of the United States to vote and hold office shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

Mr. WILLIAMS—I move that the Senate adjourn. [Cries of "No! no!" and confusion.]

Mr. STEWART—I will call for the yeas and nays on every motion to adjourn. I call for them on this motion.

The Senate refused to adjourn—yeas 21, nays 32.

Mr. STEWART's motion was then carried, and the amendment reported from the Judiciary Committee was before the Senate.

Mr. NYE expressed the hope that it would not be adopted, and that the Senate would not consume much time in the discussion of it. Much time had been occupied in discussing the propositions to give the colored man the right of suffrage, but he was now satisfied that it had been wasted, because it was apparent that no amendment could be agreed to so long as professed friends of the measure voted with its enemies, merely because their own whims were not adopted by the majority. Mr. WELCH, on the contrary, not only hoped that the resolution would pass, but also that a great deal of time would be occupied in discussing it.

Mr. HOWARD, as before, opposed the resolution of the Judiciary Committee for several reasons, the chief one being that by implication it left it in the power of Congress to say that none but members of some particular religious sect should hold office.

Mr. DRAKE again offered his amendment in these words:

This, he thought, was better than the Judiciary Committee's proposition, because it avoided the implication contained in the latter that the right to vote was a natural right.

The amendment was rejected.

Many other amendments were offered and voted down.

Mr. NYE moved to strike out all after the enacting clause, and substitute the amendment as it came from the House, and expressed his belief that unless the amendment were carried, the Constitutional Amendment would fail altogether.

Mr. ROSCOE—Why?

Mr. NYE—No, sir. I will not vote for it because I believe it will be fully open to criticism, and will be defeated in almost every State.

Mr. WILSON briefly vindicated himself from the charge of inconsistency made by Mr. NYE, and insisted that his action on this subject now was entirely consistent with his previous words and actions in regard to it.

Mr. HOWARD renewed the offer of his substitute, as follows:

"Citizens of African descent shall have the same right to vote and hold office in the States and Territories as other citizens."

Mr. SAULSBURY suggested that the annoyance and trouble caused to Congress, by the mistake of the Almighty in making distinctions of color had recently been more effectually obviated by abolishing these distinctions than he (Mr. HOWARD) thought they should not be regarded. It might be provided by one sweeping amendment, that all men should be of one color, say blue—[laughter]—and that there should be no distinction between the sex, and then those disturbing questions which occupied Congress night and day would be settled wholly to the practical interests of a great people, blue and without sex. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOWARD's motion was lost—yeas 22, nays 27.

Mr. HENDRICKS offered an amendment like that offered in the previous discussion by Mr. BUCKALEW, providing that the constitutional amendment should be submitted for ratification to the Legislatures, the most numerous branches of which should be elected after the adoption of the amendment by Congress. He thought that if the Republican Party wished to keep its faith with the people, it would not object to this.

The amendment was lost—yeas 12, nays 40.

Mr. DIXON again offered the proposition that the amendment should be submitted for ratification to Conventions instead of State Legislatures. Lost.

Mr. VICKERS offered an amendment providing that no person should be denied the right of suffrage because of participation in the late insurrection, unless actually convicted of treason. Lost.

The report of the Senate Judiciary Committee was then adopted by the following vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Abbott, Chandler, Cole, Conkling, Cragin, Drake, Edmunds, Ferry, Frelinghuysen, Harris, Howard, Howe, Morgan, Morrill of Maine, Morrill of Vermont, Morton, Osborn, Patterson of New-Hampshire, Pomeroy, Pool, Ramsey, Ross, Robertson, Sherman, Sprague, Stewart, Thayer, Van Winkle, Wade, Warner, Welch, Willey, Williams, Wilson, Yates—35.

NAYS—Messrs. Bayard, Buckalew, Davis, Fowler, Hendricks, McCreery, Norton, Patterson of Tennessee, Saulsbury, Vickers, Wilson—11.

The amendment adopted is as follows:

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote and hold office shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

At 11:45 o'clock, the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. DIXON, from the Committee on Elections, made a report in the Louisiana contested election case, with resolutions declaring that SIMON JONES, not having received a majority of the votes cast for Representative from the Second Congressional District of Louisiana, was not entitled to a seat, and that neither J. W. MENARD or CALEB S. HURT was entitled. The report and resolutions, with a minority report from Mr. KERR, were laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

THE POST OF CHICAGO.

On motion of Mr. JOHN, the Secretary of War was directed to report what action had been made at the port of Chicago, with a view to secure such additional and enlarged harbor facilities as the necessities of commerce at that point demand.

THE NATIONAL BANKING BILL.

The House then proceeded to the consideration of the act supplementary to the National Banking bill, the previous question having been seconded yesterday, and Mr. POMEROY, who supported the bill, being entitled to close the debate, yielded part of his time to Mr. POLAND, who argued in support of an amendment which he had offered, looking to the withdrawal and cancellation of all the United States legal-tender notes and bank conversion into a new issue of bonds bearing interest at six and five per cent, and redeemable after three and fifty years. He defended the New-England States from the charge of being grasping. They had taken the national banking currency because they thought that to be for the good of the country. They had taken it because the Western States did not then choose to take it. He declared himself in favor of the free banking system, believing it to be the true remedy to which they should at last come.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, addressed the House for twenty minutes in advocacy of the amendment submitted by him to the second section of the bill in reference to the mode of letting banks go into liquidation. It proposes that the interest on the bonds deposited to secure their circulation shall cease, and that in the delivery to the Comptroller of the Currency of their circulating notes in sums of one, or multiple thereof, a pro rata proportion of the bonds shall be delivered up, and the accrued interest on them be paid.

Mr. PRICE—The gentleman's amendment leads to this: that no banking institution could wind up as a National Bank and go out of business entirely until it shall have turned in the identical money received from the Treasury. A deposit of legal-tender notes would not relieve it. Do I understand that to be the meaning of the amendment?

Mr. BUTLER—Exactly.

Mr. PRICE—Well, that is perfectly awful. [Laughter.] That is all I have to say.

Mr. BUTLER—What is perfectly awful in it?

Mr. PRICE—I will tell you if you want me.

Mr. BUTLER—Well.

Mr. PRICE—Under that proposition a bank could not wind up in ten years; it could not get its circulation in. Some of it might never come in. The Government, under this law, gets the benefit of the destroyed circulation.

Mr. PARKS asked Mr. PRICE how the country could ever have specie, unless the banks did their own redemption.

Mr. PRICE—I could answer that question if I had time.

Mr. BUTLER—I will give you time to answer it; cast one away.

Mr. PRICE—The answer to that is found in this fact: that the law under which the National Bank system was organized provides that banks may redeem in the legal-tender notes of the country; and it provides, also, that when banks wish to wind up, they can return as many of the identical notes received as they can get possession of, and make up the balance in the legal-tender notes.

Mr. BUTLER—Now I will answer the answer. True, they can not return as many of these notes as they please. My amendment allows that, too, only when they do it, they shall not draw interest on their bonds deposited. And now, my friend from Iowa says they cannot wind up in ten years. Well, they never should wind up until they pay back the currency they received; they promised to do it, they agreed to do it, and they have no right to throw the responsibility on the Government.

Mr. WOOD offered an amendment as follows:

Every association authorized under this act, and the act to which this is supplementary, should provide for the redemption of its notes through one of the principal cities of the United States, to be designated by the Comptroller of the Currency, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to assort and set up under Government seal all National Bank notes received by the Treasurer of the United States from any National Bank, and forward them for redemption at the place designated by the Comptroller of the Currency, and to redeem the same in legal-tender notes to the redemption agency.

Mr. INGERSOLL being allowed five minutes to explain his amendment, said that in the first place it proposed to make the banking system of the country a free one, so that any citizen of the United States, or any living man, woman or child in the country he might, could establish a banking institution if it was deemed a good investment and legitimate business, without regard to the amount of circulation or banking capital held in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New-York, or any other State. What right, he asked, had any man, that there should be a restriction with reference to the amount of capital that men should invest in the banking business, or in reference to the amount of circulation that banks should issue, when it was admitted that all the circulation they will issue will be paid off by bondsers?

Mr. POMEROY concluded the debate. He favored the amendment of Mr. BUTLER so far as it applied to insolvent banks, but not as it applied to solvent banks. He expressed his belief that the Free Banking law of New-York was the best law that the wisdom of man had ever made; but he said that when Congress decreed that not only the Free Banking law of the State of New-York, but all other State banking laws, should be swept away by the board, and a new national system established, he for one had accepted the situation, and had endeavored to be true and faithful to the banking system. He believed, however, that it was in the wisdom of Congress to make this national system as perfect and complete as it was possible for any legislative system to be.

The debate being closed, the House proceeded to vote on the several amendments pending.

Mr. PRICE moved to lay the bill and all the pending amendments on the table, when the motion was agreed to—yeas 92, nays 78, as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Ames, Archer, Baldwin, Banks, Barnes, Barnum, Beatty, Bingham, Blair, Boutwell, Boyer, Brooks, Butler of Massachusetts, Cake, Chanler, Churchill, Coburn, Cornell, Covode, Davis, Dodge, Dox, Eliot of Massachusetts, Farnsworth, Ferry, Fields, Fox, Gaslee, Gove, Gross, Griswold, Haight, Haley, Hamilton, Higby, Hill, Hooper, Hubbard, Hubbard of Iowa, Hubbard of West Virginia, Humphrey, Jacob, Jenckes, Johnson, Judd, Kelley, Kelsey, Kitchen, Koontz, Laflin, Lawrence of Pennsylvania, Lynch, Marvin, McCarthy, Miller, Moore, Morehead, Morrill, Myers, O'Neill, Paine, Pelham, Perham, Pettis, Phelps, Polsley, Price, Randall, Robertson, Robinson, Scofield, Selye, Shellabarger, Sitgreaves, Stevens, Stewart, Taffe, Taylor, Trowbridge, Twichell, Upson, Van Aernam, Van Horn of New-York, Wait, Washburn of Wisconsin

WOMEN AS GOVERNMENT CLERKS.

The Employment of Women in the Departments at Washington—Their Qualifications—The Question of Equal Pay with Male Clerks.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday Feb. 13, 1869.

Whatever arguments may be urged, with more or less force against the theory of women's political equality with man, very few persons deny the justice of the principle that equal work should command equal pay without regard to the sex of the laborer. But it is one thing to acknowledge the right of a principle and quite another to practise it. Women are known to be as good printers, teachers, salesmen, clerks, &c., as men. But as fewer occupations are open to them, their necessity for employment is greater, therefore their services can be obtained for less; consequently they are not worth so much, according to the unenlightened idea of trade, which measures the worth of an article, not by its cost, but by the necessities of the buyer. An example of justice by our National Government in placing the labor of woman upon an equal footing with that of man in the Departments, could not fail to exert a wholesome influence upon individual employers and the country at large.

In the Treasury Department upward of 1,000 clerks are employed, about six of whom are women. The salary of these women is fixed by law at about one-half the average salary paid to the men clerks, though some of them are engaged in the same kinds of labor, and many more are entirely competent to perform such labor if allowed the opportunity. The clerkships of the men are divided into four classes. The lowest class, which is most absurdly styled the first, receives $1,200 per annum; the second, $1,400; the third, $1,600; the fourth, $1,800, while the salary of a chief clerk is $2,000 and upward. Before receiving his appointment the man is required to pass an examination in regard to his fitness for the work in which he is to be employed—an ordeal generally much dreaded by applicants—though occasionally, through a press of political influence, it is made very easy. Women clerks, on the contrary are not examined as regards fitness for the work required of them; nor have they ever been admitted into either of the four grades of clerkships which the Department comprises, as far as I can ascertain, with but one exception. More than twenty years ago, during President POLK's Administration, a distinguished Polish lady, Miss APOLLONIA YAGIELLO, who had formerly served as an officer in the Polish war, was appointed to a regular clerkship of the second grade, with a salary of $1,400 per annum. Twenty years ago this salary stood for about twice the amount of bread, comfort and luxury that it does now, and Miss YAGIELLO divided it with a man who, for $600 per annum, performed her work in the Department. She cannot, therefore, be said to have been a bona fide clerk, since she did not enter the Department to labor; but the circumstance might surely be considered as a precedent for the appointment of women to the graded clerkships. This appointment of a distinguished foreigner was probably occasioned and justified by the enthusiasm for the cause of Polish liberty then so universal. But it should be remembered that there are now actually at work in the Departments women who have performed an honorable part in our own war for liberty. Women who have given to their country's cause sons, husbands and fathers, have done more for her than fight. Many of these women are now performing the same grade of work at $900 per annum for which men receive $1,800. Most of them, too, have families to support; being, nearly all, either widows or orphans made by the war; and any person who has kept house in Washington can appreciate the poverty and hardship a family must suffer, attempting to live respectably on so small an income. A year or more ago, Secretary McCULLOCH stated, in conversation with a lady, that he had in his office in the Treasury Department three women clerks who performed as much labor, and performed it as well, as any three men clerks receiving $1,800 salary. "Why, then, do you not pay them the same?" inquired the lady. The Secretary replied that he should like very much to do so, but that "public opinion would not justify him, even if the laws permitted." Surely heads of Departments must be much more conscientious now than they were twenty years ago, much more careful to act in all cases strictly upon authority. Or is it the will to do justice more than the power, which has hitherto been wanting? Officers of the Departments who really wish to do justice to the women clerks may find sufficient encouragement, however cautious they may be in doing right, from the resolution which passed the House a month ago, introduced by Mr. JONES, of Kentucky, declaring that women in the Departments who perform the same work as men should receive the same pay. The vote by which this resolution passed—123 to 27—ought to satisfy any reasonable person that the voice of the people is for justice.

Soon after the passage of this resolution about fifty of the 200 or more women clerks who were discharged some months since for want of work were reinstated and detailed for duty in the Third Auditor's office, in the Quartermaster's Division, where they were set to work on Quartermaster's accounts, under the immediate supervision of Messrs. A. A. SHINSLER, S. C. STEBBES and THOMAS R. FLORENCE, nephew and namesake of the immortal Col. THOMAS R. FLORENCE, so lately resurrected. Mr. SHINSLER, in his report to the Chief of the Division, says:

"The ladies assigned to me for instruction in the settlement of accounts are progressing beyond the most sanguine expectations."

He also says:

"They show a great amount of energy and industry, and I have no hesitation in saying that they make efficient clerks, and certainly equal to the male clerks employed upon the same work."

It might be supposed, in view of the House resolution referred to, that they are to receive equal pay to the men clerks employed upon the same work, but as far as I can learn, no one of these fifty women has the least hope of receiving more than the usual $900 per annum. Before justice can be done the women clerks, it will probably be necessary for Congress to pass a joint resolution providing authoritatively that women employed in the Government Departments shall receive equal pay with men so employed, when equal work is performed. It is understood that Judge WM. LAWRENCE, Representative from Ohio, has prepared a resolution to that effect, and is now awaiting opportunity to introduce it. During the past year every Senator and member of Congress has been conversed with individually in regard to this question by a self-appointed committee of two strong-minded women, who, by the way, may possibly have been the fish women, whom "Olivia," the correspondent of the Washington Chronicle, in her late controversy with Grace Greenwood, through the columns of that paper, speaks of having seen "in the flesh, clamoring at the doors of Congress." But whether they clamored or not at the doors, they report having been treated with the greatest politeness by our Representatives, nine-tenths of whom assured them that they would vote for any bill which would secure the desired result.

The influence of Mr. Treasurer SPINNER, under whose immediate supervision a large proportion of the women employed in the Treasury Department are, has for years been exerted in favor of securing a more just payment of this class of Government employes, and if they ever obtain justice they will have to thank him for it more than any other man. In every one of his annual reports for the past five or six years, he has not failed to call attention to the subject. In that of October, 1866, he says:

"The experiment of employing women as clerks has been, so far as this office is concerned, a success. For many kinds of office work, like the manipulating and counting of fractional currency, they excel, and in my opinion are to be preferred to men. Some of them incur great risks, being responsible for mistakes in count, and for counterfeits overlooked. Such should, by every consideration of justice and fair dealing, be paid according to their merits, and the risks and liabilities they incur."

The Treasurer further states that some of the women in his employ have sometimes lost more than half their month's pay by reason of being short in count, or of allowing counterfeit notes to pass their hands; and he earnestly protests against the injustice which imposes such responsible employment on clerks who are paid so little.

It is also owing to Mr. SPINNER, more than to any other man, that this department of labor is now open in any degree to women. At his request the first woman clerk was employed in 1861, in cutting and trimming the notes—a work now performed altogether by machinery. Gradually they found their way into other and more difficult branches of the work, but for the space of five years their appointments were considered to be merely temporary, and their pay was limited to $60 per month, or just one-half the lowest salary paid to any man clerk. In the General Appropriation bill of July 28, 1866, they were for the first time recognized as clerks and their salary fixed at $900 per annum. In addition to the five hundred regular women clerks engaged in the Treasury Department, the Government Printing Bureau of that establishment employs about fifty women as laborers, at a salary of $60 per month.

Of the seven Executive Departments of our Government, viz.: The Treasury, State, War, Interior, Post Office, and the Attorney-General's Office, with their six thousand or more clerkships, consuming not less than $6,000,000 annually for clerk hire, only three, the Treasury, Post Office and War Departments, employ women as regular clerks, nearly all of whom are employed in the Treasury Department. The War Department employs only about thirty women, widows of soldiers, in copying accounts, the same grade of work which is performed by a majority of the men clerks in all the Departments.

The Post Office Department employs fifty women in the Dead Letter Office in redirecting the letters, which are first opened by men, who for this merely mechanical work receive salaries of the first and some even of the second grade. The letters must be opened by men because, as is said, immoral things are sometimes found in them. To see these things would, it is supposed, corrupt the morals of women. It is not argued, I believe, that man is stronger morally than woman, but rather that in doing this work he will be injured less than her, because he has less moral sentiment to be corrupted, or, in other words, the less strength persons have the less they are in danger of falling. This philosophy is not indorsed by Mr. ZEVELY, the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, who has charge of the work. He believes that mature or elderly women could perform the labor referred to with perfect propriety, and with no danger whatever of demoralization; and I think he will be found quite ready to employ in it some of the widows and mothers of deceased soldiers, who are, many of them, seeking employment, as soon as he shall receive the necessary authority for so doing. Mr. ZEVELY gives his opinion without hesitation that all the work in the Dead Letter Office can be performed entirely by women quite as well as it now is mainly by men.

The Patent Office of the Interior Department furnishes irregular work for about fifty women, which is sent to their homes by messengers of the Department. It consists, principally, in copying drafts of patents, for which they are paid at the rate of ten cents per hundred words. This work, of course, is required to be performed with the greatest accuracy, and many of these copyists are said to execute a very superior style of penmanship.

The Government printing office furnishes work of various kinds for about three hundred women. Forty-five are employed in managing the small presses, which print, blanks and other forms. The remainder are engaged in folding, trimming, stitching, and all the other various interesting processes through which a book has to pass before it is ready for the eye of the reader. They are, most of them, paid according to the amount of work they perform, being allowed forty per cent. more than is paid to women in similar establishments. Even with this liberal provision the wages earned by some of them is barely sufficient to support life, there being an inadequate supply of work. The pressure for employment is so great, and from women to whose histories and circumstances commend them to the profoundest sympathy, that Mr. DEFREES, the Superintendent, is obliged to divide the employment among them as best he can. Remarking upon the fact that no women are employed in the type-setting department, Mr. DEFREES expressed his readiness to employ them in this work as fast as any good women type-setters shall apply, and, better still, he stated that he would pay them the same for a thousand ems that he pays the men who now do the work. Here is a chance for two hundred good workwomen to make $24 per week. Mr. DEFREES states that he will employ them in preference to men as fast as they apply.

THE O'HARA MALPRACTICE CASE.

Continuation of the Inquest—The Accused Held to Bail.

Coroner FLYNN continued his investigation yesterday in the case of ELLEN O'HARA, whose death was caused through alleged malpractice on the part of Dr. JAMES WALKER. The following is the evidence adduced yesterday:

Mary Franklin, testified: I reside at No. 68 south William-street, and deceased was my sister; at half-past nine o'clock on Friday night, I went for Dr. Shine to attend deceased, who was then in labor; I did not see him, but was told he would come soon; he came about ten o'clock, and, after examining the patient, said she was not in labor; he told me to go home, and he would call after breakfast and said all was right, and he remained until Saturday morning, and visited her several times during the day; he gave me a prescription for powders for the patient, and I gave them to her before leaving; he came about eleven o'clock, and shortly after delivering the deceased with instruments, Dr. Good was not present; Dr. Walker visited deceased at eight o'clock on Sunday morning and deceased appeared to be doing well.

Patrick Lynch testified: I boarded with my sister, the deceased, at No. 36 South William-street; Dr. Good my sister sent for on Saturday night; he made several visits; I saw him take four drinks; he said deceased would be delivered about midnight, and reported that she could not be delivered without instruments; at half-past eleven o'clock I went for Dr. Walker; he came soon arrived, and obtained permission of Dr. Good to examine the patient, who offered to lose him his opening; Dr. Walker told Dr. Good in my presence that he had to cut the child in pieces; I saw the child, and it was alive; deceased told me on Sunday that she felt much better; Drs. Shine and Good came on Sunday afternoon, and Shine said he would take charge of the case; Dr. Walker came that night; he said he came as Deputy Coroner; I ordered him out of the room, and he returned with the Police Captain, but did not go up stairs; Coroner Flynn came also and conversed with Dr. Walker.

Dr. T. C. Finnell testified: I made a post-mortem examination of the remains; on laying open the abdomen the wound was of once brought to view; I discovered a wound in the uterus, which was the cause of the peritonitis; the uterus, at the right side and extended into the vagina, about two inches in diameter and very irregular; there were no signs of disease or fever; there was no abscess; I saw no opinion expressed from the examination, which was most conclusive at the post-mortem; recovery is possible, after such laceration, though not probable.

Dr. Edward Ballard testified: I attended deceased, commencing from work on Friday last, at 8 o'clock P. M.; I found her wife about to be confined with her first child, and my doctor in my stead told me that she had sent for Dr. Shine, of No. 32 Greenwich-street, and I sent for Dr. Walker; I found the patient very weak; she desired to come with me and not my wife; I left her with my wife, and said he would be back again at ten o'clock; he was sent for before ten o'clock; he came at ten o'clock; I was sent for before ten o'clock; he had left word with my wife, telling him in his office; I left word that I would get another physician if he didn't come in fifteen minutes; I saw Dr. Shine at ten minutes to ten o'clock; he said he was sent for; I asked if he was a regular practitioner; he said he was Dr. Walker, but he was indisposed; I then summoned Dr. Good, who remained all night, sleeping in the lounge; he returned the next day; my father-in-law went for Dr. Walker; Drs. Good and Walker had a consultation; Dr. Good remarked, "It was rather soon yet;" Dr. Walker said it was a serious case, and the sooner the child was delivered the better; Dr. Good said to Dr. Walker, "Perhaps you can do better;" Dr. Walker replied that he had brought his own instruments; Dr. Good then put on his hat and coat, and remarked that it was not cut at Dr. Walker; not to Dr. Walker; Dr. Walker then said he had brought his instruments, which had lain on the table all day, and left the room; I went out for about an hour, and when I returned found the wife of Dr. Walker; I asked how my wife was, and was told that they both did well until Sunday morning when I called on Dr. Walker, who prescribed for my wife; at half-past one o'clock Drs. Good and Shine came into the room and said they wished to hold an inquest; Dr. Shine asked me how my wife was, and I told him she was getting on well; my brother-in-law then ordered them out of the room; Dr. Shine left and said he would obtain the aid of the police; Coroner Flynn, Dr. Shine and several officers came in subsequently; I sent for Dr. Walker; the child died at about half-past six o'clock on Sunday evening, and my wife died at eight o'clock the same morning.

The jury rendered the following verdict: "That the said woman came to her death by rupture of the uterus, caused by Dr. JAMES WALKER. We further consider him deserving of censure in acting too hastily in using said instruments." The Coroner announced that he will hold the accused to await the action of the Grand Jury, and admitted him to bail in the sum of $2,500.

Fire Commissioners.

At a meeting of the Fire Commissioners yesterday, the following communication was directed to be sent to the Board of Health:

This Board would respectfully state that under the regulations established relative to the transportation, keeping, storage and use of combustible material in this City, one man is detailed from each Fire Company and assigned to the duty of making a careful and thorough examination within the respective districts to which they are assigned, for the discovery of explosive and dangerous combustibles, such as nitro-glycerine, with instructions to forthwith report to this Board the discovery of any such material when kept or consigned in a manner contrary to law, or in excess of the quantity authorized thereby, and upon making such discovery the officers of the Department are directed to exercise the greatest possible vigilance and [illegible] such immediate steps in further [illegible] for the protection of life and property as may be necessary. The Board would respectfully suggest that the Board of Health, in the exercise of its authority, [illegible] the provisions of the Board of Fire Commissioners, and also the removal of such nuisances as may be found to exist, and adopt such other [illegible] every possible precaution to prevent danger and accident. Upon investigation, complaint or discovery of nitro-glycerine or other dangerous explosives by or through any source, immediate action is taken by the Board and its officers to enforce the law and protect the public. The Board respectfully invites the cooperation in this behalf of the Board of Health and all other public authorities in this City and elsewhere interested in protecting the public from the hazards and danger of explosions, and respectfully call the attention of all public authorities throughout the country to the importance of this subject matter.

The Board then adjourned.

Columbia College—Fourth Annual.

The students of Columbia College gave their annual exhibition at the French Theatre yesterday. The house was well filled with an audience consisting mainly of highly appreciative young ladies, who showered the speakers with flowers and showed an unwonted interest in the abstruse subjects treated of by the undergraduate philosophers. What with the witchery of the specifics and the graceful[illegible] of the scholastic gowns and caps, every young lady must have come to the conclusion that students are very intelligent and agreeable. It was a very pleasant afternoon, and nothing was left undone to make it agreeable. The addresses were, as a rule, bright, the music was charming, and the place itself was admirably adapted to the purpose.

The programme was as follows: the music being under the direction of C. S. CHAPULLA:

Overture, "Light Cavalry," Suppé; March, Prayer, by Rev. C. J. Wolfe, D. D.; Prayer; "Martin's Forty," Professor Anthon; Music, "Thoughts of Home," Gottschalk; Oration, "The Last of the Vivarikiens," William Barrett; Music, "Thoughts of Home," Gottschalk; The Banner in the Sky, Professor Drisler; March, "Victoria," Tuxen; Fill of Carthage, Edmund Kelly; Waltz, "Wiener Bonbon," Strauss; Comic of the Mediterranean, Charles K. Garth; Galop, "Grand Duchess," Offenbach; Dream of Life, Henry M. Smith; Waltz, "Le Zephyr," Musard; Oration, "Ancient Fable," Leo Eaveleens; Music, "Rise and Fall of Olivier," Valentine Moss; Selections, "Barbe Bleue," Offenbach; National Stability, Robert H. Wilkinson; Oration, "Ancient Fable," Leo Eaveleens; Music, "Le Barrier; Barcelona," Don Sebastiano," Donizetti; Pathologia, Condon, Wm. Fanning, Jr.; Galop, "Hurly Burly," Gerfalle; March, "Chamisonne," Wagner; Benediction, Pro Fourni, "College Aire."

The Driving and Slaughtering of Cattle.

The following order was issued yesterday:

OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF METROPOLITAN POLICE, NO. 300 MULBERRY-STREET, NEW-YORK, Feb. 17, 1869.

To the Captains of Precincts:

JOHN A. KENNEDY, Superintendent.
E. W. DILKS, Inspector.

Mayor's Office.

The Mayor's first Marshal yesterday inflicted penalties in sums ranging from $5 to $5 upon the owners and drivers of several carts and trucks, for not having their names and places of business properly painted upon the same.

Mr. JOHN A. KENNOCHAN, residing at No. 18 East Tenth-street, complained that the driver of coach No. 405 was engaged by him to take him to his residence on last Wednesday night, this being the occasion of the Liederkranz Ball at the Academy of Music, which complainant was then present, and upon the conclusion of the same the defendant was engaged by the complainant to take him home. After getting inside of the coach, the driver, finding that he had only one passenger instead of four, he, as alleged, refused to take the complainant home, but drove him to the corner of Nineteenth-street and Broadway, and there refused to go any further, and upon being ordered to take Mr. KENNOCHAN home, the defendant became very abusive toward him. The defendant was then arrested and brought before the Marshal, who fined him $5.

Shooting Affray.

Yesterday JAMES BENNETT, of No. 341 West Fifty-fourth-street, made a complaint before Justice DODGE, stating that while passing Wooster-street he met JAMES D. DUFFY, alias Duff, who had in his hand a revolver, which BENNETT recognized as his property, and demanded it from DUFFY. By way of reply, the latter fired a pistol ball at the head of BENNETT, and discharged one barrel of the weapon, but without effect. DUFFY then fled through Bleecker-street, pursued by BENNETT and Officer HUTCHINSON, of the Eighth Precinct, and was captured in Thompson-street. The prisoner, when arraigned, stated that the pistol he had been given him to pawn, and finding it loaded he had only been engaged in emptying the barrels into the gutter, and that he had not fired at BENNETT. He was, however, held for trial at the General Sessions.

Capture of an Alleged Burglar.

During the night of the 16th of December last the cellar door of the premises of SIMON M. SCHULHOFER, No. 146 Attorney-street, was forced open by two men, who stole from the cellar three geese and three ducks, valued at $18. Officer EMMERICH intercepted the two men when they were about disposing of the stolen property to a receiver, one of the sharks, at the Eight-side and succeeded into the vaults, about two inches in diameter and very irregular; there were no signs of disease or fever; there was no abscess; I saw no opinion expressed from the examination, which was most conclusive at the post-mortem; recovery is possible, after such laceration, though not probable.

Dr. Edward Ballard testified: I attended deceased, commencing from work on Friday last, at 8 o'clock P. M.; I found her wife about to be confined with her first child, and my doctor in my stead told me that she had sent for Dr. Shine, of No. 32 Greenwich-street, and I sent for Dr. Walker; I found the patient very weak; she desired to come with me and not my wife; I left her with my wife, and said he would be back again at ten o'clock; he was sent for before ten o'clock; he came at ten o'clock; I was sent for before ten o'clock; he had left word with my wife, telling him in his office; I left word that I would get another physician if he didn't come in fifteen minutes; I saw Dr. Shine at ten minutes to ten o'clock; he said he was sent for; I asked if he was a regular practitioner; he said he was Dr. Walker, but he was indisposed; I then summoned Dr. Good, who remained all night, sleeping in the lounge; he returned the next day; my father-in-law went for Dr. Walker; Drs. Good and Walker had a consultation; Dr. Good remarked, "It was rather soon yet;" Dr. Walker said it was a serious case, and the sooner the child was delivered the better; Dr. Good said to Dr. Walker, "Perhaps you can do better;" Dr. Walker replied that he had brought his own instruments; Dr. Good then put on his hat and coat, and remarked that it was not cut at Dr. Walker; not to Dr. Walker; Dr. Walker then said he had brought his instruments, which had lain on the table all day, and left the room; I went out for about an hour, and when I returned found the wife of Dr. Walker; I asked how my wife was, and was told that they both did well until Sunday morning when I called on Dr. Walker, who prescribed for my wife; at half-past one o'clock Drs. Good and Shine came into the room and said they wished to hold an inquest; Dr. Shine asked me how my wife was, and I told him she was getting on well; my brother-in-law then ordered them out of the room; Dr. Shine left and said he would obtain the aid of the police; Coroner Flynn, Dr. Shine and several officers came in subsequently; I sent for Dr. Walker; the child died at about half-past six o'clock on Sunday evening, and my wife died at eight o'clock the same morning.

The jury rendered the following verdict: "That the said woman came to her death by rupture of the uterus, caused by Dr. JAMES WALKER. We further consider him deserving of censure in acting too hastily in using said instruments." The Coroner announced that he will hold the accused to await the action of the Grand Jury, and admitted him to bail in the sum of $2,500.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

PATENT—REISSUE—EXTENSION—CONFORMITY TO ACT OF CONGRESS AUTHORIZING IT—ABANDONMENT.

Agawam Woolen Company vs. Edson B. Jordan.—This is an action to recover for infringements of letters patent, granted to one John Goulding in December, 1820, for an "improvement in the mode of manufacturing wool and other fibrous material." The action was brought in the Circuit Court for the District of Massachusetts. The original patent was surrendered and reissued in July, 1836, and expired again in 1849. On the 24 of August, 1849, the Commissioner of Patents, under the authority of an act of Congress, passed in May of that year, "for the relief of John Goulding," renewed and extended the patent for seven years from the date of the original expiration, in pursuance prescribed by the act. In June, 1856, Jordan acquired title to it, and surrendered it and obtained the letters in his own name; and it is the reissued patent so obtained by him which is alleged to have been infringed by the defendants here. The defence is that the infringements covered by this patent were first invented by Edward Winslow, and were not original with Goulding; and that at the time of Goulding's application for a renewal, the invention had been on sale and in use, with his consent, for more than two years, and had been abandoned to the public. It is also set up that the reissued letters of 1836 are void in conformity with the act of 1836, which provides that if any inventor, who has obtained a patent, shall, through inadvertence, accident or mistake of the original patent, for his benefit, and it is claimed that they are, therefore, void. It is further claimed that the reissue of 1836 was void, because it was having been in use before and at the time of the granting of the reissue in 1836, it within the saving clause of the act of 1832. Nearly a half century has passed since these letters were issued, and the case has lost all interest in its own deed, and have been for many years; but all who are living were examined in the case when on trial below, as to the question of the reality of the invention claimed by Goulding, and as to the time when and where it was first made, and as to the question of the public use of the invention before the application for the renewal of the patent, it is maintained that this work is a forfeiture of the invention described in the patent, in respect of particular claims, and, therefore, of the patent also, because, as an abandonment to the public, it was not within the meaning of the act of 1836 and 1832, it a patent was void in part it was void in toto, and it is not saved by the statute giving the right to recover if a part of the invention be new, and the rest old, and the rest claimed, without right. This statute, however, does not apply to the case of an attempt to reclaim that which has once been abandoned to the public. The act of Congress for the relief of John Goulding, and the Foreign claimed, authorized the Commissioner of Patents to grant the extension, "provided, that such extension shall not have the effect to reclaim any person who may, before the time of the original grant, had purchased of Goulding or his assignees, or who, at the time of the renewal and extension, may subject them to any damage for having used it." This limitation, made expressly to protect parties in the position of the Agawam Company, doubtless prevented the grant, as was intended by Congress, and the patent we are for that reason void. It is not only provided that the extension shall not have the effect to reclaim persons who may have purchased of Goulding, but that it "shall not be construed," by the reissue to Jordan, no protection is afforded to an extensive interest, and a numerous class whom it was the intention of Congress should be protected, and the character and genius of JEFFERSON, with his influence upon modern politics, were brought out in effective relief.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—SOUTHERN DISTRICT.

IN ADMIRALTY—RESPONSIBILITY FOR LEAKAGE.

Jacob Wolf and Alexander Wolf vs. The Bark Olbers, Her Boats, &c.—BLATCHFORD, J.—This is a libel to recover the sum of $[illegible] as the value of the wine contained in a cask shipped on the bark Olbers, at Rotterdam, on the 24 of November, 1866, by C. Hoeg, [illegible] consigned to the Plaintiffs, New-York. The libelant was made under a bill of lading signed by the master of the vessel. The bill of lading covered "casks in all. It contained a statement that the property was shipped "in good order and well conditioned, and contracted for the delivery of the same, every dangers and accidents of the sea and navigation, of whatsoever nature or kind, excepted." Upon the face of the bill of lading the following words were separately impressed by a stamp: "Not accountable for leakage, breakage, rust or corrosion." The libel alleges that the master failed to deliver to the libelants the wine in one of the casks although no damage or accident of the sea or navigation prevented, and that, through the negligence of those in charge of the vessel, while the vessel was in her voyage, the wine was lost. The vessel and her master, a Dole was proceeding with an unexpired cargo, the claimant charted with all of the wine taken out of the cast, had no more than was over delivered to the master for the vessel in apparent good order as to the external condition, and does not appear that the bill of lading was fulfilled by the master, or accountable for any loss arising from leakage, breakage, rust or corrosion; that the cask was received by the libelants at New-York, to all external appearances in the same condition in which it was received by the vessel; that any loss of wine which it may have sustained, or any leakage of the cask, occurred in consequence of the vessel, and that during the voyage the vessel encountered such weather as to cause the loss of the cask were lost the loss was caused by the perils of the sea, and by reason of the cask being defective and improperly and not sufficiently strong to withstand the voyage; and that, had such cask been in proper condition, and properly and sufficiently strong to withstand the voyage, and stowed, the loss would not have occurred. There is no satisfactory evidence that the loss of the wine was caused by any dangers or accidents of the sea, or by any other cause, except by the working out of a plug which had been inserted into what was originally a hole made by the vessel in the bottom of the cask. The libelant's proof was to the intent defect in the cask. As the evidence leads to the inference that the loss of the wine was caused by this defect in the cask, and that such defect was before the cask was put on board, and as, according to the general rules of law, a loss by such defect affords no excuse for the non-performance of the contract, the parties to the suit are entitled to a decree for the libelants. The decree might well have been avoided by the exercise of ordinary skill, diligence and attention on the part of the carrier. It was therefore open to the Libelants to show that the loss was occasioned by the negligence of the defendants, or to show that the ordinary working of the ship and cargo, as an incident of navigation, would not have caused the breaking out of the plug. (Clark vs. Barnwell, 12 Howard, 272, 280.) This they have not shown, and the libel must, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

Charles Goepp for the libelants; James E. Hill for the claimants.

take the notes, and when making such agreement he had information that the maker had failed. Notwithstanding such knowledge he accepted their transfer to him on the following day, not without payment of any consideration, but in payment for the purchase of a horse. He received the notes only as a security for the payment of money, and not in payment of the value of the notes was proved by plaintiff, and on the state of facts the Court decided that there was no question of fact to go to the jury, and directed them to find in favor of the plaintiff in the sum of $1,097 81. Counsel for defendant excepted to the decision, and the Court granted the request, giving thirty days to defendants to prepare a case; the argument to be heard in the first instance at General Term, and proceedings to be stayed in the mean time.

A REAL OR CONTROVERSY.

Leonard Mosert vs. Horace Webster et al.—This was an action for $8,000, arising out of the following circumstances: The plaintiff alleged an agreement between him and defendants whereby he plaintiff, was to receive $8 per week from defendants in the capacity of rodsman, with the additional inducement that if plaintiff have satisfactorily the benefit of certain improvements in the method of receiving lumber they should pay him $1 daily, or receive one cent less, and if defendants should not pay the full value of the improvements. They discharged him before the expiration of the year, and he now brings action for value of the improvements, for $2,000—and for loss of wages for the balance of the year's service. The agreement as stated by the plaintiff was denied by defendants, who claimed that the parties had made trials with the inducements to the contract, and that the improvements were a failure, and the plaintiff as a rodsman was a failure, and hence he discharged him. The jury, after several hours' consideration, failed to agree. The Court directed a sealed verdict to be brought in, and adjourned until to-morrow.

Solomon P. Noble for plaintiff; W. L. Sloan for defendants.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER—Feb. 17.

Before Judge Barnard.

BAILING OF LOGAN NO. 1.

Mr. John Townsend, counsel for James Logan No. 1, who surrendered himself in response to the proclamation of Mayor Hall, in the early pursuit of the Bagley murderer, appeared in Court, and inquired of his Honor Judge BARNARD, if any decision had been rendered in the application for a discharge of his client.

Judge BARNARD replied that he was only the judge of counsel received by him had been handed to the District Attorney. Mr. Townsend said that the issue raised by his application was as to a forfeiture, and he had written no such letter in relation to his client. Judge Barnard stated that he understood the only delay in the discharge of the prisoner before grew out of the question of sufficiency of the bond. Upon this point Mr. Townsend replied that there was no objection in the matter so far as he was concerned, but he simply demanded a formal honorable discharge of his client, and not, that he be "put out" by the back door, as it were. There being in the judgment of the Court no grounds for his further detention, the Court ordered that he be discharged from custody on giving his own recognizance in the sum of $1,000.

BOMGRIM.

The case of Donato Migalito, charged with homicide, was called up for trial. Mr. Ker for the counsel for the prisoner, appeared in Court and asked for an adjournment of the trial until Monday next, owing to his engagement in the Mullaney perjury case already in progress before Judge Rosekrans in the United States District Court.

Judge BARNARD said he overruled the motion, and ordered a jury to be called. While the jury was being called, Mr. McCarthy came and said that he protested against the proceedings. The indictment had been found in August last, and at every succeeding term of the Court and the Court of General Sessions he was ready to Come and prepared to go on with the case. He was the only counsel the prisoner had, and confined with fifteen or twenty in the prison, and it was cruel to accused to now force him to trial without the aid of his counsel.

The District Attorney said that neither the counsel stated he did not wish the case to be postponed, but suggested that it might be arranged to try it to-morrow morning.

Mr. McCarthy said he could not possibly be ready to try the case before Monday morning, and after a brief discussion between himself and the Court, as to the cause of his having announced his readiness to proceed at a former term, the Court, not definitely determining such application, ordered a jury to be called, and the trial was ordered to stand over until Monday morning.

No other case being ready for trial the jurors were discharged until to-morrow morning, and the Court adjourned.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—Feb. 17.

Before Judge Curtis and a Jury.

ASSAULT OF A SEA CAPTAIN ON A CABIN BOY.

Benjamin Phillips vs. Wm. S. Gibson.—This action was brought to recover damages for assault and battery. The defendant was Captain of the yacht Nevertout, and the plaintiff, a colored lad, was cabin boy on the same craft. The latter testified that without any provocation, the Captain beat him severely with the ladle-rack, and afterward with some rattan. Plaintiff showed the marks of the blows on his arms and back. The captain, having been put upon the stand, testified that he had abundant cause for flogging the lad which, by the way, he said, amounted to "very little." He had caught the boy stealing. Judge CURTIS in an able charge, during which he paid a high compliment to the colored boy, the plaintiff, whom he characterized as a bright, intelligent and apparently truthful witness, gave the case to the jury.

After a brief consultation the jury rendered a verdict for the plaintiff for $50, to which the Court added an allowance by way of costs.

For plaintiff, Jas. H. Wheelright; for the defendant, M. St. Andrews.

The petitioner, who is seeking to set aside the probate, alleges that she is the lawful widow of the decedent, having married him many years ago in Philadelphia, and that subsequently the Proponents Corp. that neither is the widow of the decedent. Contestants then rested, and produced as witnesses Maria Ferit, the widow of Peleiah Ferit, who testified that she first knew Robert Watson in 1828; that he was a waiter in her family, and that she had known him ever since.

The testimony was declared.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Recorder Hackett.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday morning two trials were held, nothing in each case, and was acquitted. No sentences were announced, judgment being postponed in the expectation to allow the prisoner an opportunity to bring witnesses as to character. Large number of pleadings were received and the days of trial appointed.

ACQUITTED.

Samuel Shaw, a gray headed old man, pleaded not guilty to the charge of grand larceny, and received a trial, according to the evidence, Henry A. Weir, jr., counsel for two Grand Jurors, testified that on the night of Nov. 6, Grand Jurors entered on the 14th of Dec. counsel, one, which was subsequently cut on the premises of the prisoner. The officer who arrested the prisoner stated that the prisoner told him that he had purchased the same who stole the lumber, and he arrested one of them, who was discharged for lack of any evidence against him.

The prisoner testified that he was a house and sign painter, and was employed by Mr. Joseph Wadley, a house and sign painter, for seventeen years since he had known him. The jury rendered a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was discharged.

WM. FORD, indicted with Francis Bradley for stealing burglarious, pleading not guilty, received a trial. Officer Miller and Mr. Pearsall, a private citizen, both testified that on the night of the 17th of Nov. they saw the prisoner and Bradley, with others, in Hester-street. They saw the prisoners at the door of Layer's saloon, Officer Miller, No. 16 Hester-street. Officer Miller had also stated that he saw the prisoner in a hallway in Chrystie-street, some time previously. The watchman took Bradley in charge, while Officer Miller attempted to arrest Jones, who was in the hallway, and while running thrown away a burglar's jimmy, which was picked up by Officer Miller. Mr. Levy stated that he was robbed by a burglary. Mr. Levy stated that he was robbed by a burglary. Mr. Levy stated that he was robbed by a burglary

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

A dispatch from Madrid says that an unsuccessful attempt was made on Tuesday to assassinate Gen. PRIM. Three arrests have been made in consequence.

BLISS and MASTERMAN, the attachés of the American Legation who were arrested in Paraguay by President LOPEZ, charged with conspiring against his Government, have arrived at Rio Janeiro, en route to Washington. It is supposed they will be held to await any charges that LOPEZ may make against them.

In the House of Commons, on Tuesday evening, Mr. DISRAELI expressed his regret that the ratification of the treaty with the United States had not been consummated. Mr. GLADSTONE assured him that the negotiations would be terminated in a manner satisfactory to both parties.

The announcement that Ex-King FERDINAND, of Portugal, had consented to become a candidate for the Spanish throne is contradicted. Another expedition, consisting of 6,000 men, is to be sent from Spain forthwith, to put down the insurrection in Cuba.

CUBA.

Our dispatches from Cuba furnish a summary of events since Sunday last. From these we learn that the insurrection is rapidly spreading throughout the island. Havana itself is practically in a state of siege, although not officially declared so. Wherever the standard of revolt is raised, the insurrectionists are joined by large numbers of recruits. Those who do not join the rebels are forced to abandon their labors and seek safety within the Government strongholds. Many plantations have been entirely deserted by both owners and employes, and crops are spoiling for want of care. Captain-General DULCE has directed all arms in private hands to be turned over to the Government and has refused to recognize the American Consul as a diplomatic agent to protect the rights of American citizens. Some Americans have been arrested on political charges. Admiral HOWE of our navy, who is at Havana with his flagship, has promised to remove Americans to Key West in case their lives are in danger at Havana. A detachment of troops had a fight with some insurgents near Miguel-Bano, but did not succeed in dispersing them. The troops lost twenty men in killed and wounded. After the fight the town was burned by the soldiers.

CONGRESS.

The Senate yesterday, after considerable debate, agreed to the report of the Committee of Conference on the bill relating to the navy. It proposes a large reduction in the naval force and in the marine corps. The Committee on Public Buildings reported adversely on the bill to purchase a new site for an Executive Mansion. The Judiciary Committee submitted a resolution and report, declaring that the Amnesty Proclamation issued by the President on Christmas, was not authorized by the Constitution and laws. A resolution was adopted directing the Attorney-General to furnish a list of the names of persons convicted of violating the Revenue laws, the penalties attached to such convictions, and the number of pardons issued to such offenders. The message of the House asking for a Committee of Conference on the Suffrage amendment was taken up, and debated at great length. At length a motion to recede from the Senate amendments to the bill was agreed to. Debate then ensued upon a motion to agree to the House proposition, but this was rejected, yeas 31, nays 37. The amendment reported from the Judiciary Committee was then taken up, amid much confusion, and Mr. NYE spoke in opposition to it. The debate was continued till midnight, when the report of the Judiciary Committee was agreed to.

The House Committee on Elections submitted a report and resolution regarding the contested seat of the Second Congressional District of Louisiana, declaring that neither SIMON JONES, J. W. MENARD, (colored,) nor CALEB S. HUNT were entitled to the seat. The report was laid on the table. The House then took up the bill supplementary to the National Banking laws. The previous question having been moved and seconded on the preceding day, Mr. POMEROY had the close of the debate, but yielded a portion of his time to Mr. POLAND, who spoke in favor of the amendment offered by him. Mr. BUTLER also spoke in favor of his amendment. Several other members spoke, after which the House voted on the several amendments. The amendment offered by Mr. COBURN as a substitute for the fourth section, for the issue of circulating notes to banking associations, organized in States and Territories, having less than their pro rata banking circulations, was adopted—yeas 94, nays 66. Some other modifications of the bill were agreed to, after which the bill and all its amendments was laid on the table, by a vote of yeas 72, nays 73. A recess until evening was then taken, and, in the evening session the Army Appropriation bill was considered in Committee of the Whole, the question being upon Mr. BUTLER'S amendment providing for the reduction of the army. Mr. BUTLER explained and spoke in favor of his proposition. Without disposing of the bill, the Committee rose, and the House adjourned.

GENERAL.

The charter election in Syracuse on Tuesday resulted in a sweeping Republican triumph. The entire ticket was elected by about 500 majority—an increase of 300 over the majority last Spring. Six of the eight Aldermen elected are Republicans. The First, Second and Third Wards, which have generally gone Democratic, elected Republican Aldermen, while the Fifth and Seventh, usually Republican, elected Democratic Aldermen.

The Kansas Senate yesterday rejected the proposition to strike the word "white" from the State Constitution. The vote was yeas 14, nays 17, three Senators voting in the negative, because the bill did not also strike out the word male.

The Kiowa Indians have all come in to the reservation at the Washita Mountains, in accordance with the demands of Gen. SHERIDAN. The Cheyennes and Arapahoes are marching to the same point, and it is expected that these three belligerent tribes will speedily be peacefully located on the lands set apart for them.

In November last, a freight train on the Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroad was going up a steep grade when a coupling broke, and three or four of the rear cars commenced to descend the grade at a frightful rate. The brakeman of the rear car became alarmed, and instead of applying the brake leaped from the car. The cars ran back until they came in collision with another train, whereby several persons were killed. HAMILTON, the brakeman, has just been convicted under the laws of Pennsylvania of neglect of duty, and sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor for thirteen months.

The North Carolina State Auditor, Mr. ADAMS, has been committed to jail at Raleigh for having refused to obey an order of the Supreme Court directing him to remove his papers from the Clerk's office.

A meeting of prominent manufacturers and miners was held in Philadelphia yesterday, and it was resolved to organize a National League for the protection of our manufacturers.

A Washington correspondent says that the only large payments to be made from the Treasury this month are on pension accounts, and that the receipts will reduce the public debt about $10,000,000. On the first of next month there will be paid $4,500,000 interest on ten-forties. This will be the only heavy payment out of the Treasury until the first of May.

There is to be a reunion of naval officers formerly belonging to the Mississippi Squadron, at Cairo, Ill., to-day.

JOHN W. LEE, a respectable citizen of Lexington, Ky., on Monday last, while temporarily deranged, cut the throat of his wife with a razor and then cut his own throat. Both are dead. Mr. LEE had been sick for a long time.

The Nebraska Senate yesterday passed the House bill giving twenty thousand acres of land for the construction of every mile of railroad track within the State boundaries.

The steamship City of New-York, from Liverpool, at this port, reports passing the steamers Russia and City of Paris, hence for Liverpool, the Russia being four miles ahead.

In the alleged malpractice, in the case of Mrs. ELLEN O'HARA, Dr. JAMES WALKER has been held to bail in the sum of $2,500.

JAMES LOGAN, No. 1, was yesterday released from prison on $1,000 bail.

A youth named THOMAS LAFON, son of one of the most respectable citizens of Newark, N. J., was sentenced yesterday to one year's imprisonment and a fine of $100 for the accidental killing of a man who was beating his LAFON'S, brother.

Cotton was in light demand at easier prices yesterday. Breadstuffs were unsettled on a moderate trade. Provisions and Groceries were in good request and quoted buoyant. The Freight engagements were limited.

Financial Questions in Congress.

There is confessedly no probability of enacting Mr. SHERMAN'S financial scheme; the only danger is, that it will be made an occasion for wasting the time of the Senate, and a pretext for obstructing and defeating some of the really desirable reforms which have been sanctioned by the House.

The loss of Mr. SHERMAN'S bill few will regret. It is an attempt to precipitate resumption against the wishes and interests of the great body of the people, and its effect would be to make a bad condition of affairs infinitely worse. It is a revival of the policy of contraction, which Mr. MCCULLOCH abandoned under compulsion, and its whole scope and design are favorable to those who are already abundantly cared for by the Government. The evils long complained of in regard to the Secretary's power to interfere in the concerns of Wall-street, it would perpetuate, in defiance of the expressed opinions of the mercantile and moneyed community. A measure so pregnant with mischief, so utterly unadapted to the convictions and requirements of the time, ought not to be allowed to block the path of more useful bills. Mr. SHERMAN can have no expectation of its passage, and every hour employed in its discussion is an hour thrown away.

Nor is any other general measure likely to take its place. The influences concentrated upon Mr. SHERMAN'S plan are not strong enough to carry it through, but they may be able to prevent the adoption of any bill not conceived in their behalf. For this reason, we apprehend that no progress will be made with the scheme presented by Mr. MORTON, who has caught the right idea of preparation for resumption through the Treasury accumulation of specie, but spoils its practical operation by fixing the date at which resumption shall commence.

The session will almost certainly close, then, without any legislation on the general question of finance—a circumstance much less to be regretted than would be the enactment of any measure with currency contraction as its starting point, and vast discretionary power in the hands of the Secretary as one of its characteristics. The present condition of affairs is not satisfactory, but it is at least tolerable. Time will bring more relief than any device like that on which Mr. SHERMAN places his main reliance. We may be all the more readily reconciled to natural remedies now that the Supreme Court, by recognizing the validity of gold contracts, has cleared the path for business on a specie basis. We are henceforth free to choose between obligations in currency and obligations in coin, and a gradual approach to a greater firmness of values may therefore be anticipated. With this advantage gained, there will be no harm in waiting yet a while for general resumption.

The series of measures passed by the House on Saturday have merits of their own, apart from the general question. They relate to practical matters about which, among honest men, there is little difference of opinion; and they are called for by an experience which has been too costly and discreditable to be long neglected. The bill prohibiting the further increase of the public debt, prescribing more specifically the details of the periodical debt-statements, enjoining upon the Treasury the performance of its own work and forbidding secret sales of gold and bonds, is intended to remove a great scandal. The Secretary must, undoubtedly, have some latitude of action, but it should not be allowed to extend to these concerns. It is notorious that the present statement of the debt withholds information that ought to be made public, and equally notorious that under Mr. MCCULLOCH'S manipulation of the debt, its burden has been rendered more grievous. So again with reference to the manner in which transfers and sales of bonds and gold have been conducted. They have given rise to not unreasonable suspicion, and have been as costly as they have been injurious. For these errors of omission and commission Mr. HOOPER has effectually provided; and the responsibility of delaying or defeating his reform rests with the Senate.

The bills connected with National Bank management are also important. The report of the Comptroller of the Currency portrayed with striking effect the mischief and danger of the present system of certifying checks and playing the game of gamblers by locking up greenbacks. He showed that unscrupulous combinations may, with the help of banks, produce at will the worst features of sudden inflation and contraction; and that the only remedy is to be found in limiting certificates to the sums at the credit of the parties drawing checks, and in making it an offence to loan money on currency as collateral security. These points are covered by measures prepared by the House Committee on Banking and Currency, and the Senate has acted on both with uncommon promptitude. The bill prohibiting loans on legal-tender notes as collaterals was passed by the latter body on Tuesday, and the one regulating the certification of checks was reported from the Finance Committee with every prospect of an early passage. Their joint effect will be to arrest gross forms of the demoralization which disgraces Wall-street; and if, in addition, the Senate concur in the measure drafted and carried by Mr. HOOPER, a decided step will have been taken toward the correction of the worst features of Treasury management.

The Crime Against Witnesses.

In the recent report of the Police Commissioners there are some very just remarks regarding the hardships and injustice which are imposed upon non-resident witnesses by confining them in the House of Detention, while the malefactor against whom they are to testify is often at liberty on worthless bail. It does not require much investigation to discover how such a course toward innocent parties, who have had either the misfortune to be present at the commission of an offence or to have been victims of a crime, has the effect of defeating the ends of justice. The majority of men who are in this manner deprived of the liberty which is clearly their right, will close their lips rather than divulge the knowledge which will place them for an indefinite period in close durance.

It is the custom to confine non-resident witnesses, through lack of the necessary bail, for their appearance in Court for the purpose of obeying a provision of the State Constitution which declares that in a criminal action the defendant is entitled to produce witnesses in his behalf, and to be confronted with the witnesses against him in the presence of the Court. This construction of the Constitution seems to be in direct contravention of one of the first principles of law, which asserts that no man shall be imprisoned except for crime. This principle has been carried out by the Legislature in reference to the unfortunate debtor, and the only case to be found upon the statute book in which it has been deemed wise to modify, if not to contravene it, is in the instance of a witness who is unable to afford such security as a magistrate may prescribe for his appearance upon the trial of a criminal offence. Hundreds of illustrations of the distress which has been occasioned by this provision might be enumerated. Persons have been incarcerated for months who unfortunately have been accidental witnesses of crime, while the defendant has been at liberty,—virtually discharged by means of his ability to give "straw bail."

An abuse so flagrant and subversive of the right of every citizen to be protected in his liberty, where, by his own act he has not forfeited it to the law, demands correction.

The proper manner of abolishing this infamous wrong is shown in the amended Code of Criminal Procedure, which was reported to the Legislature several years since, by the Commissioners who had been appointed for the purpose. They recommend that whenever it shall satisfactorily appear, by the examination upon oath of the witness, or any other person, that the witness is unable to procure sureties, he ought forthwith to be examined on the part of the people. This recommendation, of course, ought not to apply to the prosecutor, or to an accomplice in the commission of an offence, both of whom should be held, in order that the defendant may not be deprived of the benefit of their cross-examination before a trial jury.

The Legislature ought to act in this matter at once.

More Tinkering with Disabilities.

The Senate has before it a bill passed by the House, removing political disabilities from residents of Southern States; and the House has just passed other bills of the same character, as reported by the Reconstruction Committee. Several hundred citizens seem likely thus to be restored to civil and political usefulness before the close of the session. It is creditable to the House that it refused by a decisive majority to gratify partisan malignity by striking out some of the names reported. It assumed that the Committee had good ground for the recommendations, and did what it could to give them the effect of law.

The objection to this method of dealing with the question of disabilities is the neglect of a general principle, and the injustice which is done to large numbers of persons whose title to relief is ignored, though in all respects as valid as that of the persons named in these bills. The rule laid down is, that relief shall be granted to those who prove themselves loyal in their relations to the new order of things. In practice, however, it embraces only those who make themselves conspicuous, or in some manner obtain the good opinion of Republican officials or Congressmen. The many who pursue their avocations in quiet, and have neither the disposition to seek nor the chance to earn the indorsement of local committees, are left under the cloud. The inferior material which comes to the surface obtains the benefit of remedial legislation; the patient, unobtrusive merit which remains out of sight, continues to suffer the harsh penalties of the law.

If the time has come when disabilities may be safely removed, the better method of procedure would seem to be the adoption of a general measure, based upon a just and intelligible principle, and obviating all suspicion of invidiousness or partiality. The present plan may not be designedly partial, but it looks so; and the impression upon the Southern mind is not favorable to the fairness or generosity of the Government. By enacting a comprehensive measure, the only remaining source of irritation in the reconstructed States would be removed, and the magnanimous promise of the Chicago Convention would be fulfilled. It would be better to except from relief the "men who had gone from the Senate Chamber to organize rebellion"—whose continued exclusion from office Mr. TRUMBULL demands—than to adhere to a process by which the removal of disabilities is made to wear the semblance of partisan favor.

The Chances for Women to Work.

The opening of a school to teach women the business of telegraphing is a very important step toward improving their condition. What women need more than anything else, in this country and at this time, is the chance to work,—the chance to earn their own living, to maintain themselves in independence and comfort, without losing their reputation or forfeiting their self-respect. Everything done which can aid them in achieving this result, is a positive boon to women, and deserves the most hearty encouragement.

There are and always will be thousands of women in every community who have nobody to rely on for support. Very many never have a chance to marry, and many more are deserted by their husbands, or find it impossible to live with them. Many are left widows,—or overtaken by misfortune that deprives them of support,—sometimes with children dependent upon them for the means of living, and without property, friends or aid of any kind. Every society has, and always must have, thousands of women thus thrown out of the smooth grooves of common life, and forced to find or make a path for themselves as best they may.

What can such women do to obtain a living? What position can be more helpless or hopeless than theirs? There is no recognized place or occupation for them in the ordinary walks of business or of labor. If a woman thus situated has had the advantages of a good education, she may teach. If she has special talent and training for any walk of art she may paint, or embroider, or sing, or give readings, or go upon the stage; but there is, after all, but little demand for such services, and unfortunately the number of dependent women who have the talent to make their efforts in such walks successful, compared with the whole number of those who must do something, is very small. Sewing, domestic service, drudgery of one sort or another, is about all that is left for the great multitude of them; and for none of these things are they either well fitted or have they the slightest talent or taste.

The proper condition for a woman, in all civilized countries, is undoubtedly that of dependence upon somebody else for support. It is the office of men to earn a living by work; and in a perfect state of society men will earn all that is needed for the support of both sexes. But the state of society never is perfect. There are always accidents and mishaps, which disturb its arrangements, and throw some of its members out of the channels in which they should move; and women are the victims of these mishaps more often than men, and are rendered the more helpless by them.

Now what is a woman, when thus suddenly thrown upon her own resources, perhaps with children dependant upon her, to do? She ought to be able to find some calling open to her,—some trade, some business, some simple art easily acquired and easily practiced, in which society has need of her services, and to which, therefore, she could promptly resort with a reasonable certainty of being able to earn by it a comfortable living. It is so elsewhere. It is so preëminently in France and, to a less extent, in England and throughout Europe. Women there are very largely employed as clerks in dry-goods shops, as cashiers and accountants, as attendants at post offices, as operators in telegraph offices, as type-setters, around readers, and in many other occupations which with us are monopolized by men, and to which women seldom get access. We are beginning to improve somewhat upon this state of things in some departments. Women are coming to be somewhat extensively employed as clerks and assistants in public offices. Many are beginning to learn the trade of type-setting. And the opening of a school to teach women the business of telegraphing, with the encouragement of employment proffered by the great telegraph company of the country, is another step in the right direction.

But there is one mistake women must not make in this matter, into which those who are acting for them are quite likely to fall;—we mean the mistake of demanding equal payment with men. It may be right and just that they should have it;—and if it is, they will be quite certain to get it in the end. But just now the question is not one of rights, but of getting work. They are now crowded out of the field by the men, who have sole possession and mean to keep it. The only chance for women to get into the field at all is by making it a matter of interest for those who control it, to let them in. So long as their labor is cheaper than that of men, there will be a powerful reason for employing it,—the most powerful of all the reasons which control the industrial arrangements of the world. When this ceases to exist,—when women become parties to Unions, and strikes and other artificial means of forcing high prices for labor, and refuse to work at all, except at prices fixed by others than themselves, they will lose the main motive which gives them a chance of employment at all. They can never count on being employed as a matter of right; they must make it a matter of interest for others to employ them. When they secure recognition as a skillful, faithful, profitable class of workers, they may more nearly dictate their own terms; but what they want now is a chance to work; they want places now occupied by men; and those they can get only by underbidding the men,—by giving the same work at a less price. If they surrender the right to do this, they throw away their main means of securing their chance to work at all.

The Whisky Fraud Trials.

The World and the Tribune seem to agree cordially in regarding what they style the "Courtney-Bailey-Fullerton business" as nothing but a "ferocious fight between these three officials, in which the people of the United States have really very little interest." Perhaps it is so,—though it is scarcely likely to strike the public in that light. Mr. BAILEY is a revenue officer who has procured the indictment of a large number of persons for defrauding the revenue. Mr. COURTNEY is the District-Attorney who has brought the cases to trial, and who has convicted and sent to the Penitentiary a good many of the accused and guilty parties. Mr. FULLERTON is an outside party who, under cover of authority from President JOHNSON, opened a crusade against both these public officers, and was himself indicted by a Grand Jury for having conspired to extort money from a Revenue Collector; and his intervention in the matter was used to delay the trials of other parties long enough to allow them to escape. And now he has succeeded, through the Attorney-General, in securing the delay of his own trial for an indefinite time. The only "fight" in the case seems to have been between the public officers, COURTNEY and BAILEY, and the parties indicted for crime—the former trying to bring the latter to trial, and the latter very naturally resisting the attempt. In dismissing the matter as of no public importance, the Tribune and World are, of course, siding the effort of the indicted parties to avoid a trial.

A Railroad in Broadway.

The Broadway Railroad bill is up again in the Legislature, in as bad a shape and with the same general features as usual. The proposition is to give the franchise, without compensation, to a dozen individuals who happen to want it, and to authorise them to monopolize the main thoroughfare of our City for their own uses, and to render it virtually useless for everybody else. This is substantially what street railroads have actually done for nearly every street through which they run. Ann-street, West-street, Church-street are rendered utterly useless for the accommodation of carriages, hacks, business wagons and vehicles of every sort by the railroad tracks laid down, and by the railway cars that run through them. It is true, a great many people ride in these cars, and are accommodated by them. But that is not a good reason for depriving those who do not ride in them, of the use of the public streets altogether.

Broadway is now the only street through which carriages, carts or business wagons can pass from the lower to the upper part of the City. The consequence is that it is crowded throughout the day. We need other streets parallel to it for the accommodation of the public. But certainly, in the absence of such parallel streets, we cannot afford to have Broadway itself blocked up by a railroad. There is no public demand for such a railroad. Aside from those who expect to make money out of it, nobody wants it;—and unfortunately aside from those who fear they will be pecuniarily injured by it, few will take the trouble to protest against it.

We have railroads enough already. What is needed is,—not more roads,—but to make those we have more efficient and capable of accommodating the public. The great necessity of the day is to substitute steam for horse power on our City roads. When that is done, every road now in the City can transport three times as many passengers as it does now,—twice as quickly and with greater comfort. To say that this cannot be done, is nonsense. If the managers of the roads will set about it in earnest, they can devise means of doing it and procure the assent of the Common Council, as readily and as easily as they now take possession of public streets and public squares for their own use, or accomplish any object on which they have set their hearts. This is not done because they are not in earnest in wishing it done.

MINOR TOPICS.

Quite a number of people have taken to printing letters in the newspapers addressed "To Gen. GRANT, President elect of the United States," and a Philadelphia writer on the tariff has already published an octavo volume of letters to that address. This is doubtless thought to be a good way to get the public to read these letters; but their writers must certainly have wit enough to know that it would be utterly impossible for the functionary to whom they are addressed to find time (to say nothing of disposition) for reading a tenth part of them. It would be enough to drive anybody crazy to read them all.

"Hiram" writes to the Star (we don't know who "Hiram" may be) challenging the TIMES to "champion the side" of the boss bricklayers against the journeymen, as regards the eight-hour question, the apprentice laws, and the action of the Bricklayers' Union. We must decline to "champion" the interests of the bosses in these matters, as such a proceedure would not be in our style. When either one side or the other, in this business or any other, adopts a course which we consider prejudicial to their own best interests, we shall, for their own benefit, point out their error, and shall attempt to indicate, for their own advantage, the proper line to be pursued. We are quite as ready to censure the bosses as the journeymen when they take wrong or foolish steps. It is this way we "champion" the rights of labor and of capital—neither of which can be disturbed without injuring the other, and damaging the whole community. Even "Hiram" can understand this in course of time.

We notice that a number of new coöperative movements, in the way of grocery stores, and small manufactories, have lately been begun. If they are managed by men of integrity and ability they will succeed. If not, they will surely fail.

On Friday last, the tomb of President LINCOLN, at Springfield, was decorated by the citizens—the day being the anniversary of his birth. On Monday last, the remains of BOOTH, his assassin, were surrendered by the Government, and given over to his family, for "Christian" burial. On Tuesday last, the Senate debated for the second or third time, the petition of Mr. LINCOLN'S widow for a pension, but came to no conclusion.

With the curious audacity of intellect characteristic of that singular and singularly brilliant man, CHARLES READE adopts these words as the motto of his new story, "Put Yourself in His Place," which is to be begun in the March Galaxy:

"I will frame a work of fiction upon notorious fact, so that anybody shall think he can do the same; shall labor and toil, attempting the same, and fail—such is the power of sequence and connection in writing."

The advance sheets of the opening chapters certainly promise a novel, sensational and remarkable enough to justify the throwing down of such a gauntlet.

There is a bill before the Legislature for an increase in the salaries of the Metropolitan Fire Department so as to make them correspond with the salaries in the Police Department. At the same time there is a proposition before the Legislature for an increase in the salaries of the Police Department. This is a very pretty business all around, and, if kept up long enough, and carried far enough, must ultimately result in our paying very elevated and ornamental salaries to all parties.

Our contemporaries are suggesting various improvements in the construction and management of velocipedes. One says there ought to be a hack to the seat; another thinks three wheels would be better than two. We suggest four wheels with shafts and a good-sized pony to draw the machine. The more nearly they approach the American buggy,—or, better still, a basket wagon,—the more comfortable and convenient they will be.

In different parts of yesterday's TIMES were three particular statements about President JOHNSON: first, that our Common Council—following the example of Baltimore—proposed to give him a public reception if he come through this City on his way to Tennessee; second, that one of our European steamship lines had offered him a passage to Europe at the close of his term, which offer he had accepted; third, that, according to our Tennessee letter, the politicians of Tennessee are greatly agitated over the prospect of his running for Governor of the State. It seems from all this that President JOHNSON means to keep himself in the public eye, with the view, probably, of running for the Presidency in 1872 as the Independent People's Democratic Constitutional Anti-Taxation candidate.

A number of Republican meetings have been held in different parts of the country for the purpose of calling upon Congress to repeal the Tenure-of-Office law, and thus give President GRANT a fair and free opportunity to purify the public service. The recent debates on the subject in the Senate indicate that the repealing bill, which passed the House, has a good chance of becoming law. The Senators opposed to the repeal do not pretend to produce any arguments on their side.

Police Commissioner BRENNAN is making a very ostentatious display of his purpose to deal severely with offending Policemen. But is he not carrying the joke a little too far when he proclaims that he will allow "no woman's character to be impugned here?" There are a good many women who would scarcely claim such exemption as this at the hands of the Police. It is all very well for the Commissioner to be polite and gallant; but it is not necessary that he should make himself ridiculous.

The New-York Observer states that the American Bible Society has resolved to abandon its usual May anniversary meeting, and probably other religious societies will follow its example. This will destroy what has been for many years one of the most marked features of New-York society. The May Anniversaries have long been among the most widely attended, and to many the most attractive incidents of the year. Since the old Broadway Tabernacle, in which they were always held, has been removed, they have not been quite what they were before: and the civil war and other events which have come up to divert and absorb public attention, have deprived them of very much of their old éclat. They used to bring thousands of the benevolent and religious from the country districts. But in the City they had ceased to excite special interest.

A very curious question has arisen in Washington. A servant of the Russian Minister is reported to have said that at a dinner party given by his employer, Mr. CORCORAN and Senator BAYARD both said they would give large sums of money to have Mr. LINCOLN put out of the way. Wishing to investigate the matter the Senate Committee summoned the servant in question before them, but he refused to answer any questions on the subject,—saying he should consider himself no better than a spy if he were to reveal conversations that occurred at his master's table. If he is so sensitive on the point how came the story about? Did he ever say that such a conversation did take place, or is the rumor a pure fabrication? Both Senator BAYARD and Mr. CORCORAN deny, in the most explicit and emphatic terms, that either of them ever said anything of the kind. Congressional Committees will best consult their own dignity, and be told fewer lies, if they do not pry into dinner-table talk.

The Democrat belabors the TIMES through a long-winded article based on the idea that Revenue Commissioner WELLS is Secretary of the Navy. The Democrat is a new-comer among City journals;—it must get itself posted on public affairs.

The Baltimore American thinks it very desirable that Gen. GRANT should select one member of his Cabinet from among the loyal men of the Southern States. Such action, it thinks, would be regarded with great favor, as indicating his estimate of Southern loyalty, and would aid very much in advancing the feeling of confidence and satisfaction required for the completion of the work of reconstruction. This, it will be remembered, was precisely the consideration which led to the nomination of ANDREW JOHNSON for Vice-President. But the state of the country now is by no means what it was then.

The evening schools of this City are closing about this time with some interesting exercises, showing the good they have been the means of effecting. But why should they be worry of well-doing and come to a stop? They are capable of doing good, all the year round, and should be continued, since they supply a general want in a community like ours, where people must go to work so early in life. Young people should always have the opportunity of sitting over books and learning something; and they would certainly learn more in one month at an adult age than they did previously in a year. Common sense and the best social policy call for evening schools, as the necessary complements of day schools, through all the months of the year. It is a fatal sort of absurdity to assume that a lad is done school when he goes to work, and when his intellect is naturally fitest and most eager to learn.

The Provisional Government of Spain has stoutly joined issue with the angry Church, and declared itself, according to its own form of expression, ready to take up the glove of its opponent. A proclamation to this effect has been issued by SERRANO, who, alluding to the resolute assumption of the Governor of Burgos in the cathedral assures all concerned that any resistance of the priest party shall be met with the whole force of the army and navy. These are brave words; but they show some apprehension too; and if the Spanish bishops, like those of old Milan, were to "ring their bells" the "provisionals" would probably find something more to do in the streets.

The great railways are under way everywhere, simultaneously with the great Isthmian canals, great ocean cables and great suspension bridges. The Costa Rica Secretary of State has made a contract with certain American citizens to build a railway from Limon Bay to the Gulf of Nicoya. The contract has been just concluded, and we may soon look for the railway bonds in the City. At the same time, a company of English contractors and engineers are at Balize, in Honduras, preparing to begin a railway which is to run from Omoa, on this side, to the Gulf of Fonseca, in the Pacific. All this concerns Boston, New-York and Norfolk; for unless we can have good roads across this continent our business of two worlds will flow away toward the Gulf of Mexico. But no doubt there will be trade enough and room enough in this Western Hemisphere for all sorts of oceanic enterprise.

The Late Sol. Smith.

From an interesting sketch of the late SOLOMON F. SMITH, published in the St. Louis Republican, we take the following:

SOL. SMITH was numbered among our oldest citizens, and probably no resident of the city was more widely known, he having been for a long series of years a theatrical manager and popular actor in most of the principal cities of the West and South, and during most of these years he resided in St. Louis as his home. His loss will be deeply regretted by our citizens generally, but especially by those to whom he had been long socially known.

He abandoned theatrical management, and all business connection with the theatres, in 1852, and soon thereafter turned his attention to the practice of law in this city. During the latter years of his life he occasionally mingled in politics, but had no aspirations for the emoluments of office, and the whole field was uncongenial to his nature. In this connection, we may add that in 1861 he was elected a member of the Missouri State Convention as an unconditional Union man, and in that body bore a part in creating a Provisional Government for the State.

The early part of SOL. SMITH'S theatrical career was chequered, and marked by various vicissitudes of fortune in the sparsely-settled West, but he bore up manfully under many reverses, and finally achieved substantial fame as an actor, and accumulated a very handsome fortune.

He grew up with the theatrical spirit of the West and expanded with it. He became a power in the theatrical world, and his experience of the stage extended over nearly half a century. As an actor, his forte was comedy, and he belonged to the old legitimate stock of comedians, of whom so few are left to grace the stage. As a social companion, his temperament was genial, and he possessed a most kindly disposition. He was also a humorist of no mean pretensions, and his contributions of this character to the Press are widely known and greatly relished. He could tell a good story and embellish it with a quaintness of style that was sure to win the applause of his hearers.

SOL. SMITH prepared an epitaph for himself, to be engraved upon a plain stone in Bellefontaine Cemetery, St. Louis. It is as follows:

SOL. SMITH,
Retired Actor.
1859—10—16.

"Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player,
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more."
"All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players."

Tammany Masked Ball.

The succession of masquerades this Winter, frequented by the pretty actresses of the different theatres, and the wild enjoyment experienced there, suggested to those young ladies a little more dancing with the gay jeunesse dorée of the City. A ball, consequently, was projected by the Tammany company, at the suggestion of Mr. EDWARD M. FOX, the business agent, and Mr. HARRISON of the box office. Irving Hall was decided on as the festive scene, and invitations were sent to the members of all the different metropolitan theatres, together with numerous ladies and gentlemen unconnected with the histronic profession. Last night was the time appointed, and the hall was gaily decorated with flags for the occasion. The ball was strictly an invitation affair, but many persons who had not been invited were anxious to procure tickets, and even to the extent of $15 each were several times made for them. Owing to the late hour of the closing of the theatres, the guests did not arrive till near midnight; but, when the dancing began, it was kept up with great spirit until near daylight. Select parties admitted to the floor without a mask, and it was difficult, therefore, to determine the identity of the ladies present. The richness and elegance of many of the costumes, however, warranted the supposition that the wearers were of note, either in professional or social life. The ball was danced with full vigor by several members of the French opera troupe, and great enjoyment was generally exper

SPAIN.

Speculations as to the Occupancy of the Spanish Throne—More Troops to Sail for Cuba.

PARIS, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The reports that Ex-King FERDINAND, of Portugal, has consented to be a candidate for the Spanish Throne are premature. Though strongly urged, he still refuses to allow his name to be used in connection with the sovereignty of Spain. The majority of the members of the Constituent Cortes now in session, at Madrid, are opposed to the Duke of Montpensier, and there is little prospect of his success.

MADRID, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

In addition to the large detachment of reinforcements about to sail from Cadiz for Cuba, the Government will send out, as soon as the necessary transportation is ready, another expedition, which will number at least 6,000 men.

SOUTH AMERICA.

News from the Paraguayan Prisoners—Bliss and Masterman on their Way Home.

PARIS, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

Full details of the South American news are published here to-day. Mr. MCMAHON, the American Minister to Paraguay, accompanied President LOPEZ to the interior after the capture of Villeta. BLISS and MASTERMAN, the attaché of the American Legation, who were arrested at the time of Minister WASHBURNE's departure, and who are charged by LOPEZ with conspiracy for his overthrow, were at Rio Janeiro in the United States flagship. It was supposed they were on their way home for trial.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Reply to the Queen's Speech—The American Treaty.

LONDON, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The address in reply to the Queen's speech was agreed to unanimously in both Houses of Parliament. In the House of Commons last evening, Mr. DISRAELI expressed his sorrow that the ratification of the convention with the United States was not announced. He hoped, however, for a speedy completion of the treaty. Mr. GLADSTONE was sure that the negotiations would end in the same spirit in which they commenced. The final issue would doubtless be satisfactory to both countries.

March first has been named for the opening of the debate on the question of the disestablishment of the Irish Church.

The Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Bill in the Pennsylvania Senate.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The bill introduced in the Senate last week, intended to prevent the present stockholders of the Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Company from managing their own property by keeping three-fourths of the old directors in office, still remains in the Senate Committee, with very little prospect of its passage. It was expected here that the annual report of the Pennsylvania Railroad would express some interest in the contest between the Fort Wayne Directors and the Erie Railroad, but the report is not only silent on the subject, but speaks highly in favor of the Columbus route between Pittsburg and Chicago. This independent position of the Pennsylvania Railroad narrows the contest down to an effort of the present Fort Wayne directors to keep themselves in office. It is hinted that the effort is made in reality to throw the Democratic influence of the road in favor of the nomination of one of its officers for Governor of this State. The Erie Railroad Company has paid no attention to the legislative efforts to interfere with the vested rights of stockholders, believing all such efforts unconstitutional.

Arrival of Indian Tribes at Washita Mountains.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

Official information from the Washita Mountains, of the date of Jan. 22, says that with the exception of four or five lodges, all the Kiowa Indians had come in. The General in command would immediately settle them upon the reservation. The advance of the Arapahoes and Cheyennes had also arrived, and the remainder were approaching. They also will be placed upon the reservation.

Adjournment of the Quebec Legislature—Terrible Snow-Storm in Canada.

MONTREAL, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The Quebec Legislature adjourned yesterday for want of a quorum, only twelve members being present. A snow-storm stopped the trains and prevented the members from reaching the capital. The snow in the streets here is eight feet deep, and some streets are almost impassable. The roof of the drill-shed fell in this afternoon, owing to the weight of the snow. The trains from the East and West are very much delayed. A statement published by Dr. SMALLWOOD shows that the fall of snow this Winter so far is about 115 inches, which exceeds by 38 inches the total fall in any year for twenty years past.

Several extensive lumber merchants in the Ottawa district have closed their operations for the Winter, owing to the difficulty in getting provisions into the woods for the men.

Negroes as Railroad Passengers in Virginia.

RICHMOND, Va., Wednesday, Feb. 17.

In the United States Circuit Court, Judge UNDERWOOD presiding, the case of ROBERT STEVENS, a negro, of Charleston, S. C., against the Richmond and Fredericksburg Railroad Company, for putting his wife in a second-class car by force, after selling her a first-class ticket, came up. The Judge, in his charge to the jury, which was composed of half blacks and half whites, said:

"Distinction on account of color was a relic of barbarism, which had been happily done away with, even in that stink of iniquity New-York, where it had been tolerated longer than elsewhere to secure Southern trade. After an incidental statement to the effect that Virginians were given to drunkenness, the clergy were not exempt from this frailty, the Judge read several extracts from the Bible, and closed by instructing the jury to teach this country that they must not make distinctions on account of color. The jury brought in a verdict of $1,000 damages for plaintiff."

Proceedings of the State Legislature of Louisiana.

NEW-ORLEANS, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The House continued its session until nearly midnight engaged in the consideration of the School bill, which was finally adopted. The House to-day passed a bill loaning State bonds to the amount of $600,000 to the Mexican Gulf Canal, taking the first mortgage. The House also passed finally the Senate Civil Equality bill. The bill is identical with the one passed last year, but vetoed by the Governor.

SOCIAL SCIENCE.

The Convention at Albany—Addresses by J. Meredith Read, Samuel Elliot and Prof. Goldwin Smith.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The American Social Science Convention met at Agricultural Hall this evening. The opening address was delivered by J. MEREDITH READ, Jr. The President of the Association, SAMUEL ELLIOT, of Boston, then delivered an able address explanatory of the objects of the Association.

Prof. GOLDWIN SMITH, of Cornell University, was then presented, and read the first paper of the present session of the Association. His subject was "University Education." The first and largest portion of his address was a statement somewhat in detail of the system of education pursued at the two leading English Universities; its monastic origin and the efforts that had been and were now being made to modify and improve it. Coming down to the subject of university education he considered the comparative merits of a general and professional course of studies, and also the position which the classics would occupy in a general course. The classical course had its origin in the middle ages when it was the only means of unlocking the sources of knowledge. Though not of that prime necessity as formerly, yet the classics were still of great importance in a liberal course of education. The superiority of the Greek and Latin languages remains undiminished, that of the Greek especially. He was not sure that they had ever yet fulfilled their mission, and the Latin would not once more be the language of law, and the Greek of science. The only languages that can compare with them is the English. The writing of Latin verses was now deemed the most precious part of the English University course, and yet an eminent London journalist had told him that the best writers he had met in point of form were those who had distinguished themselves at college by writing Latin verses. With reference to the position that physical science should occupy in the university course, he could only say that these sciences alone should be adopted. That could be thoroughly mastered by the student, and yet leave room for literary education. The evils of literary education without science were well known in England. The evils of scientific education without literary training were beginning to appear. A true university had a twofold duty to perform: That of advancing learning and science as well as teaching it. The Professors should not be overworked, but should have leisure to pursue their own studies, to increase their knowledge and keep up with the most advanced thought and discovery of the age. What would NEWTON have done for the advancement of science if he had been compelled to hear four recitations a day in the rudiments of science, and run about the country delivering lectures, to eke out the balance of his salary? He would suggest to the Social Science Association the necessity in founding investments of making provision for a residence in the institution of a class of students who had passed their college course. Such students might be of great assistance to the Professors, particularly in the teachers of science, and would help to advance the reputation of a University as a seat of learning. If there were to be special departments, he would plead for a department of political science. It could not fail to elevate the politician into the statesman. The world was beginning to discover that politics were not merely a matter of passion and declamation, and a department of political science in our university would do much to improve and elevate the standard of political morals and conduct. The speaker then referred briefly to the subject of college discipline, and expressed his approval of the semi-military discipline adopted at the Cornell University, as being better than any he had yet seen, and the only effective discipline likely to be submitted to in a country like this. Lastly, he considered the question of university education for women. The popular talk about the highest education for woman cuts both ways. The highest education for woman was that kind of an education which was best adapted to her. Unless physiology was prepared to show that there was really no difference between man and woman, he must certainly object to the block of the English university system of competitive examinations for women. They were of doubtful expediency in a sanitary point of view for men, and in his opinion would never do for young ladies. Any general system of education for women must have reference to the peculiar sphere of women, and not for exceptional cases. Now the normal duties of women were those of wife and mother, and it was to aid the performance of these duties that woman's education should mainly tend. The fact that this cry for university education for women came at the same time and chiefly from the same source as the Woman's Rights movement should inspire a watchfulness and caution on the part of this Association in adopting its teachings.

The Association will meet again to-morrow morning and afternoon, and a reception will be given them in the Assembly Chamber in the evening.

Report of Mr. E. B. Elliott on the Metric System of Coinage.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

On the 21st of July, 1866, Hon. WILLIAM D. KELLEY, Chairman of the House Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, reported a bill (H. R. 1,445,) to promote the establishment of an international metrical system of coinage. The Secretary of the Treasury requested Mr. E. B. ELLIOTT to examine this bill and give his views in relation thereto. In accordance with this request Mr. ELLIOTT has made a very interesting and elaborate report, which the Secretary transmitted to the House on the 9th inst., where it was referred to the Committee above mentioned and ordered to be printed. The bill provides:

1. That the future gold coinage of the United States shall be of nine-tenths fine, the dollar piece and half dollar to nine-tenths fine, the quarter dollar shall contain one and a half grammes of pure gold, and the remainder shall be alloy. 2. Such coin shall be legal tender at its face value after a specified future date, and $1,000 of this new coinage shall be the legal equivalent of $1,000 of the old coinage of the United States. 3. That they shall have their weight in grammes and their standard fineness stamped upon them. That silver half dollars and smaller silver coins shall, in future coinage, consist of standard silver, nine-tenths fine, and weigh a gramme to each dollar of value, and shall have their weight and fineness stamped upon them. That silver legal tender for payments of all sums exceeding $10, Mr. ELLIOTT believes all the interests of the bill, and sets forth the importance of its enactment by Congress, and the advantages which would result therefrom. He says the gold coinage of the United States is very nearly metrical. By reducing their standard weight, not three parts in one thousand, or 0.1,000 of the world, be made metrical, and would thus have exact and simple relations to the coins of Germany. It seems desirable that the value, given of Germany, the United States gold dollar, the gold frame of France and the gold crown of Great Britain should have such simple relations to each other in point of value that the following equivalents may obtain, viz.: Three union crowns equal twenty dollars (gold,) equal one hundred francs (gold,) equal one thousand pence (gold,) or four pounds of two hundred and fifty pence each. After referring to the different standards that prevail, the hope is expressed that the decision of commercial nations will be in favor of the German standard, i. e., thirty grammes of fine gold, rather than the French standard, which is somewhat less, or the gold standard of Great Britain. We should then have gold coins as follows: Three union crowns, twenty metrical dollars, one hundred metrical francs, fourteen metrical pounds, or one thousand metrical pence, each weighing thirteen and one-third grammes of standard gold, nine-tenths fine, and containing thirty grammes of pure gold.

The report contains numerous tables which embrace much interesting and valuable information relative to the monetary systems of the leading nations of the world, and is deservingly of the careful perusal of the business portion of the community and all others who are interested in the subject to which it relates.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP CITY OF NEW-YORK.

The steamship City of New-York, which left Liverpool on Feb. 3 and Queenstown on Feb. 4, reached this port yesterday, bringing two days' later news than was previously at hand.

The Manchester Chamber of Commerce met Feb. 1. In a series of interesting addresses the importation of cotton, the commercial policy of the United States compared with that of Great Britain, and many kindred subjects were discussed.

Permission to be sold in the streets has been withdrawn from the Paris Gaulois on account of an article insinuating that the reason why the Prince Imperial did not preside at the annual dinner of the Charlemagne Lyceum was that he had not obtained as good prizes as were expected.

M. DE BISMARCK'S last speech has produced considerable irritation in Paris. It is remarked that the Journal Officiel not only abstains from saying a word about it, but does not even mention the important sitting of the Berlin Chamber, in which it was delivered.

The moment is approaching at which the last traces of the Universal Exhibition of 1867 will have disappeared. The demolition of the building occupied by the Imperial Commission and the elegant chalet of the general commissariat is nearly terminated. These constructions had alone remained standing of all that were erected in the Champ de Mars. At the north and south that vast surface is now restored to circulation, and the central portion on which the Exhibition building stood is being leveled. Double rows of trees are being planted parallel with the Avenue de Labourdonnaye and de Suffren, to replace those which formerly bordered the eastern and western sides of the space between the Ecole Militaire and the Seine.

THE IRISH CHURCH.

The Privilege of Convocation Denied the Irish Bishops.

The following memorial has been presented by the Irish Bishops to the Queen:

To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty:

We the Archbishops and Bishops of the Irish branch of the United Church of England and Ireland, respectfully approach your Majesty, humbly praying that the privilege which your Majesty graciously granted to this branch of the United Church the same liberty of meeting in Convocation which is enjoyed by the English province.

We have felt it our duty to lay the same request before your Majesty already, but we do it the more urgently at the present moment, seeing that measures are pending which must nearly affect the welfare of this Church, on which, while yet in debate, it seems only just that the Bishops and clergy should be able to deliberate and deliberate in a canonical manner and express their judgment.

We are further prompted by the fact, in the event of such a change being made in the outward conditions of our Church, the consequences would be most disastrous if there were no such body already in existence, able to consult and speak for the whole Church with authority in a crisis which, at the best, must be full of difficulty and danger.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

Signed M. G. Armagh, Samuel Meath, R. Derry, R. Killaloe, Charles P. Tuam, William Derry, Richard C. Dublin, J. P. Ossory and Ferns, Robt. Cashel, Wm. Killaloe, John Cork, Charles Limerick.

It has received the following reply:

WHITEHALL, Jan. 29.

MY LORD: I beg to inform your Grace that I have laid the honor to lay before Her Queen the memorial of the Archbishops and Bishops of the Irish branch of the United Church, transmitted by your Grace to the Secretary of State on the 22d December last, and that Her Majesty would be most ready to be pleased to grant to that branch of the United Church the same liberty of meeting in Convocation which is enjoyed by the English Province, and regret to intimate that it is not Her Majesty's Government, after mature consideration of the memorial, do not feel justified in advising Her Majesty to accede to the prayer. I have, &c., E. A. BRUCE.

His Grace the Archbishop of Armagh.

John Bright on Capital Punishment.

From the Springfield Republican, Feb. 17.

The following letter from JOHN BRIGHT to one of our countrymen, though written more than a year ago, is just published, and is of general interest:

DEAR SIR: I do not think the punishment of death is necessary to the security and well-being of society; and I believe its total abolition would tend to increase those security which it is now supposed by many to prevent. The security and well-being of society do not depend upon the severity of punishments. Barbarian in the law promotes barbarian conduct. Severe punishment in the law I put on a par of cruelty under the law becomes examples of similar acts done contrary to law. The real security for human life is to be found in a reverence for it. If the law appears to set the example the people would begin also to regard it. A deep reverence for human life is worth more than a thousand executions in the prevention of murder, and it is, in fact, the great security for human life. The law of capital punishments, while pretending to support this reverence, does, in fact, tend to destroy it. If the death penalty is of any force in any case to deter from crime, it is of much more force in inducing juries to find men guilty of crime, by a jury's feeling the fact that Kings, Parliaments, Judges and juries may determine when and how men may be put to death by violence, and familiarity with this idea cannot but weaken the reverence for human life. To put a man to death for crimes, civil or political, is to give proof of weakness rather than strength, and of barbarism rather than Christian civilization. If the Christian nation could get rid of the gallows it would be a great advance. Our by one we Americans are institutions; and I hope, I feel that is good, we may not be unwilling to follow you.

I am very truly yours, JOHN BRIGHT.

WEST INDIES.

The Insurrection Rapidly Extending—Havana in a State of Siege—The Rights of American Citizens—Arms in Private Hands to be Surrendered.

VIA KEY WEST, Monday, Feb. 15. }
VIA LAKE CITY, Wednesday, Feb. 17. }

The insurgents have made fresh demonstrations in the vicinity of Cojimar, under the leadership of Col. INCLAN, a Mexican officer. In the Cuyas Mountains 2,000 men are waiting the signal of march. There are other Mexican officers in command of the insurgents in this district, and in other parts of the island.

Advices from Trinidad to the 8th have been received. The American Consul there had joined the insurgents, and turned over his office to another person.

HAVANA, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

Transports arrived in the harbor to-day with reinforcements of regular troops from Spain.

The number of arrests for political causes are daily increasing. Several officials have been thrown into prison on suspicion of revolutionary proclivities.

Engagements between the troops and the rebels are reported to have taken place near Trinidad, Cienfuegos, and Baracoa Santo.

The Diario states that the insurgents near Sagua la Grande are completely surrounded by the Government troops, and will be compelled to surrender.

The steamer Palmira sailed to-day for Baltimore, and the steamer Granada, from New-Orleans, sailed for Havana.

The Government has received intelligence of a rising in the vicinity of Matanzas. The rebels number over 800, and the greatest alarm prevailed there.

HAVANA, Tuesday, Feb. 16. }
VIA KEY WEST, Wednesday, Feb. 17. }

The City of Havana is practically in a state of siege. Gen. DULCE has been urged to formally declare a state of siege, but is as yet disinclined to do so. He, however, may issue a proclamation to that effect after the expiration of the term of amnesty.

Cubans are applying daily to be permitted to take refuge on board the United States flagship Contoocook in case trouble should break out in the city and their lives be threatened. Admiral HOFF has consented to take American residents to Key West.

An engineer employed on a plantation in the jurisdiction of San Antonio has arrived here. He reports that a party of insurgents 300 strong invaded that district. Plantation hands fled panic stricken, and work on the estates had ceased.

A letter from Trinidad, dated the 12th inst., says: "The Cubans have raised the standard of revolt everywhere, and have destroyed the telegraph lines and stopped the mails."

A dispatch from Nuevitas, dated the 11th inst., reports that banditti are pillaging the estates in the country.

On the 7th a detachment of troops marched from Nuevitas to Miguel-Buro, burnt the town, and returned the next day, having lost twenty of their number in killed, wounded and prisoners. The insurgents firmly held their ground in the vicinity of the town.

Negroes are wandering about the country without restraint. There are many Spaniards in the insurgent ranks.

At Puerto Principe provisions are becoming scarce, and the inhabitants are threatened with a famine. The roads between Puerto Principe and Nuevitas are impassable, owing to the heavy rains.

A hundred soldiers are sick in the hospital at Nuevitas.

HAVANA, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

Gen. DULCE still continues active measures for the suppression of the insurrection. Permission to carry arms has been revoked, and all arms have been ordered to be delivered up to the Government within four days.

An arrival from Kingston, Feb. 4, reports that the American steamer Estrella has been seized for money advanced for repairs.

The second telegraphic cable, the end of which was lost last Summer during the attempt to make connection with the Cuban shore, has been picked up, and is now working admirably.

A steamer from Cadiz has arrived here with two Generals and 500 regular troops.

Señor MARICIO ROBERTS, the newly appointed Minister of Spain to the United States, and Mr. DUNLOP, British Consul for Aspinwall, are passengers on the steamer.

Six hundred insurgents are surrounded by the troops in the Cochino swamps, and are endeavoring to escape in detail.

The Diario has advices from Villa Clara, dated the 13th inst., which assert that in spite of the presence of the rebels in that district, the majority of the population are loyal to the Government.

News from Santiago to the 10th inst. has been received. There were five deaths from cholera in that city on the 9th. The epidemic was increasing in violence in the surrounding country. The negroes were destitute of food, and returning to their plantations. There were frequent desertions from the ranks of the volunteers, the men fearing the cholera.

Gen. MARMOL has gone to the Western Department. Five hundred troops have been sent to Palma Soriano.

ARRIVAL OF THE HAVANA STEAMSHIP MORRO CASTLE

The Havana steamship Morro Castle, which left Havana Feb. 13, reached this port last evening. Purser R. W. ALBURT has our thanks for courtesies.

Progress of the Insurrection—Movements of Revolutionists and of Troops—Gen. Dulce's Proclamations.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, Feb. 13.

The reports which we have had almost daily for the past week of risings by the disaffected, or demonstrations made by the insurgents at different points, show that the revolutionary movement is still far from being suppressed. It seems to be the generally expressed opinion that on the 21st of this month, when the term of forty days allowed in Gen. DULCE's proclamation of the 12th of January for the return of the insurgents to their several homes and deliver up their arms, shall be completed, that important events may be expected. Both sides are evidently preparing for a grand struggle. VARMASEDA and his forces are almost in a state of quietude, while the revolutionists are working their wires for more arms, men, ammunition and outside help, and actively drilling their men and enlisting new adherents to their cause.

From the 6th inst. the telegraphic communications have been interrupted between Cienfuegos and Havana. On the arrival of the steamer Rapido at Batabario, on Sunday, the 7th inst., we learned that a considerable number of insurgents had risen in the District of Camarones, which is situated on the line of the railroads between Cienfuegos and Villa Clara, and that which also leads to Sagua La Grande. The first act which they hastened to perform was to cut a railroad line between Cienfuegos and Villa Clara. As soon as the news of this rising reached Cienfuegos, the Lieutenant-Governor of the place started in pursuit with all the troops at his command, and leaving the town garrisoned by the volunteer corps.

Private letters received from Cienfuegos state that this movement is of more formidable proportions than was at first apparent, and asserts that the revolutionists number some 4,000, and have for leaders VILLEMIR, MAZA, REDONDO, CAVADA and other well known and influential men. The CAVADA mentioned is ADOLFO CAVADA, who served during the war in the United States as Colonel of a Philadelphia regiment of Zouaves, and lately has been the United States Vice-Consul at Cienfuegos, until removed at the request of Captain-General LERSUNDI. About a week ago his brother, FREDERICK F. CAVADA, who also served in the United States as Lieutenant-Colonel of a New-York regiment, and was for a long time prisoner of war in the Libby Prison, Richmond, and author of a book called Prison Life, resigned the position he has held since the war of United States Consul at Trinidad, and it is strongly suspected has joined the revolutionists.

Several attempts at revolution have been made in the Vueltas Abajo region, and it is notorious that the state of feeling in that district is very unsettled, although it is affirmed that the prospect of a good crop of tobacco is sufficient guarantee for order until after the harvest.

Letters to the Prensa of the 6th, from Sagua, state that the insurgents had invaded that district, coming from the direction of Las Vueltas, and the same day had taken possession of La Encrucijada, the terminus of the Sagua La Grande Railroad. On the following day they cut all the rail and telegraph communication between Sagua and Villa Clara, near the Cruces. The troops, both regular and volunteer forces, marched for Villa Clara on the 8th. The insurgents are headed by the Montegrados, of Sagua la Chica.

DULCE'S PROCLAMATIONS.

Gen. DULCE has published the following proclamations:

Superior Political Government of the Island of Cuba:

The 10th ult. by my decree of the 12th of January expired, on the 21st day of this month. The Provisional Government of the nation wished to give an example of tolerance and harmony, and was the first to proclaim, in accordance with the saving principles of the revolution of September, a new era of conciliation and of oblivion of the past. I also spoke in the name and at my words many were the inhabitants of this island who, forgetting the true and legitimate interests of the country, accepted the honest benefit of a measure which, besides affording them well-being and rest in the bosom of their families, foreshadowed the close of a struggle for them desperate and sterile. Spite of this, the disturbers of public order, those who relied for their personal importance and future prosperity upon the inestimable advantages and necessary amelioration of the land in which they were born, and others who endeavored to retard the action of the Government, have, in fact, frustrated the honest and deliberate intention of placing in the painful alternative either of remaining in a state of uncertainty, exposed to violent attacks, always subject to false interpretations, and which, besides being repugnant to me, would have constituted to put in doubt the stability of the political contract, and the good faith of the noble Spanish representative impulses of the Provisional Government. Unfortunately for them they have succeeded in the latter object. Hence, the manifestations of Yara, and all whose desires tend to open war in their behalf, the 12th day of January, have given rise to them the course of conduct marked out in my decree of amnesty; and open war shall remain until the 20th day of this month, when, if there be no-day, decided doubtedly by the insurgents and chiefs, the possibility of victory, lies at the cry of independence, burning property and decimating the support of an infinite number of families, if they not those who avoid themselves of these men, as hereinafter, can count upon the generosity of the Government. The social questions demand efficient remedies and terrible sacrifices. And I, the generous, mild, and interpreted by weakness of the Government when has been not clemence. The public opinion of the rest of the nation, shown itself unanimously, regarding integrity of territory as the first and most necessary point, as the best basis for political liberty. The Provisional Government undertook the solemn duty of preserving that liberty and of saving the nation from the abyss in which it was in danger of extinction. That obligation the Provisional Government will discharge. It deplores, nevertheless, to see itself compelled by the evil intention of a few and the abuse of others, to restrain the exercise of measures which, although authorized by the legality of the revolution, do not cease to be contrary to the spirit of progress and the essence of modern institutions. Therefore, and in use of the extraordinary powers vested in me by the Provisional Government of the nation, I do decree the following:

ARTICLE 1. The effects of my decree of the 9th January, relative to the amnesty, are prolonged for the present, and while the present circumstances exist.

ART. 2. The former censorship is restablished.

ART. 3. Suits at law already commenced will follow the course marked by the laws for the Courts of Justice.

ART. 4. Newspapers shall not be distributed without the written permission of the Censor.

ART. 5. No newspaper shall be published without a license from the Superior Political Government.

ART. 6. The violation of either of these orders shall be considered as an act of malfeasance, and its author shall be delivered to be tried by Court-martial.

HAVANA, Feb. 13, 1869. DOMINGO DULCE.

In use of the extraordinary powers vested in me by the Provisional Government of the nation, I do decree the following:

ARTICLE 1. All acts of malfeasance shall be tried by the usual Courts-martial.

ART. 2. Suits at law already commenced will follow the course marked by the laws for the Courts of Justice.

ART. 3. Any aggression by act or deed against any of the delegates of the Government will be considered as an act against its authority, and its author subject to trial by Court-martial. DOMINGO DULCE.

HAVANA, Feb. 13, 1869.

Clothing Cutters' Strike.

The clothing cutters on strike held their usual meeting last night, at No. 10 Stanton-street, but received no reports of additional employing houses to those already mentioned, having accorded the $24 a week demanded. An assessment of $4 a week each having been levied on the employed members of the Union for the support of those on strike, a chief feature of the evening proceedings was that of receiving the contributions. To-night a mass meeting will be held at the same place.

Printers' Strike.

The journeymen book and job printers on strike, held their daily meeting yesterday afternoon at No. 63 East Broadway, but no reports were given of an acquiescence in the new scale of prices on the part of those employers yet in opposition. A statement was made that fifteen additional compositors were out of employment through the temporary stoppage yesterday of The Ledger, through the illness of its proprietor.

Meeting of Employing Printers.

The employing printers held a meeting yesterday at the Astor House, and arranged a new scale of prices to be submitted to the striking journeymen. It was substantially the same as that offered three weeks since, but differs in certain details, which will probably be more acceptable to the strikers.

TREASURER'S OFFICE, ALBANY, Feb. 12, 1869.
THE INJUNCTION, LATELY EXISTING, prohibiting transfers or purchase of the stock of this Company, has been dissolved, and notice is hereby given that the transfer books will be opened on the morning of Monday, the 15th inst., and will be closed at 3 in the afternoon of Saturday, the 27th inst.
Owing to the considerable time for which the books have been closed, because of the recent litigation, and the probable large amount of stock awaiting transfer, it will be necessary to defer the payment of the dividend heretofore advertised for the 20th inst. until the 15th of March next.
For the purpose of facilitating the preparations for its payment, stockholders intending to transfer are requested to do so without delay.
The payment of the Dividend on the "Interest Certificates," issued under the resolution of the Company passed Dec. 1, 1868, is not affected by the injunction—it is still enjoined until the further order of the Court.
An Engraved "Interest Certificate," in more appropriate form, is being prepared for substitution for the printed one now outstanding. Public notice will be given when the exchanges can be made.
E. D. WORCESTER, Treasurer.

ADRIAN H. MULLER, P. B. WILKINS & CO. will sell at auction on TUESDAY, March 2, 1869, at 12 o'clock, at the Exchange Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, BY ORDER OF LEWIS R. BROWN AND CLARENCE S. EBOWN, ESQS., the above-described block, situate at the junction of the GRAND BOULEVARD AND 7TH-AV.,
only 800 feet distant from the CENTRAL PARK, on high, commanding ground. In the most eligible located property in the section of the City. The great improvements now in progress, combined, together with the natural advantages of position, &c., combine to render it very desirable either as an investment or for speculation. Thirty per cent of the purchase money will be held with restrictions as against nuisances similar to those contained in the deeds given by the Hazard estate; like restrictions will also cover the block of land lying north of it, thus effectually securing this property for first-class improvements. The sellers pledge themselves that this sale shall be OPEN AND FREE IN EVERY RESPECT, and that there shall be no bidding in their behalf, their object being to multiply the number of residents in the neighborhood, and by selling with the proper restrictions as against nuisances, and on immensely liberal terms, to secure the erection of first-class improvements, thereby enhancing the value of their property owned by them in the immediate vicinity.
The terms of sale will be such as will enable every one to secure a lot for a future home, (while prices are yet low,) in what must become, in an incredibly short space of time, the most fashionable and desirable quarter of the City.
The title of the property is indisputable, and printed abstracts will be furnished to purchasers free of charge. The assessment for the Boulevard and Circle has all paid.
Terms.—Ten per cent of the purchase money and the auctioneers' fee to be paid to the auctioneers on the day of sale; twenty per cent. on the 8th day of March, 1869, at the office of Messrs. Lewis R. Brown & Young, No. 6 Nassau-st., New-York. The balance, 70 per cent, may, at the option of the purchaser, remain on bond and mortgage of the premises for three or five years. Parties desirous of completing their purchase before the 8th day of May, will have the privilege of doing so, and will be allowed interest from the time of taking their deeds up to the 8th of May, 1869. The purchaser will be held to have been informed as to the boundaries, and lots belonging to the occupants, and are to be removed and delivered by the owners.

ALBANY.

A Railroad in Twenty-third-street—A Bill to Protect Railroads Against Dishonest Conductors—Another Veto.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Feb. 17, 1869.

Nothing of special interest was done in either House of the Legislature to-day. The Senate spent most of its time, before going into Executive session, in passing local bills. No[illegible] was done in Executive session beyond the confirmation of Notaries.

Mr. HALE's bill for the prevention of lottery was favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee, with some slight amendments.

Senator TWEED introduced a bill for a surface railroad in Twenty-third and other streets of New-York City, the main provisions of which are as follows:

Senator TWEED's bill names as corporators Cornelius Corson, George W. Millard, Samuel M. Hoyt, John Cox, George Mitchell, James Kennedy, Michael Karan, Owen Tibbals, John Kenny, Joseph and others. The proposed route is from Twenty-third-street, North River, along Twenty-third-street to Sixth-avenue, thence by Twenty-third-street to Ninth-avenue, thence by Eighth-avenue to Ninth-avenue, thence by Twenty-third-street, Greenwich, Hudson, Hudson-street, Varick-street, Grand-street, Pitt-street, Delancey-street, Avenue A, thence by the South-side of Stanton-street, East River; thence along Pulaski-street to Church-street, Canal-street to Laurens-street; also along Canal-street to Mercer-street to Eighth-street to Greenwich-avenue to place of beginning.

NO RIDE WITHOUT A TICKET.

Among the new bills introduced in the Assembly was one designed to protect railroad companies from the dishonesty of their conductors, but in order to accomplish this praiseworthy object, it visits all the penalties of dishonesty upon the unoffending passenger, and would be an intolerable nuisance to the traveling public. It makes it a misdemeanor for any traveler to ride on a railroad without having purchased his ticket before getting into the car; prohibits conductors from receiving any money for fares, and authorizes them to thrust any passenger out of the cars who has no ticket, notwithstanding he may tender his fare to the conductor—except that he may allow the passenger to ride to the nearest station.

ANOTHER VETO.

Gov. HOFFMAN sent in his second veto to-day, which is as follows:

To the Senate:

I return without my signature an act entitled "An act to amend section one of chapter 404, of the laws of 1868, relative to building a bridge at Fort Covington."

The original act authorized the Commissioners of Highways of the town to borrow $3,000 to be expended in building a bridge across the Salmon River. The present bill increases the amount to $4,000. By a general act passed April 5, 1848, entitled "An act to vest in the Boards of Supervisors certain legislative powers, &c., it was provided among other things, that no bridge in the several counties of the State (except New-York) might authorize any town in their respective counties to borrow any sum, not exceeding $1,000 in any year, to build or repair any bridge, or bridges in such town, and fix the time for the payment of the same, which time shall be within ten years, and for assessing the principal and interest thereof upon such town." This general law rendered any special legislation in regard to the bridge at Fort Covington wholly unnecessary. The subject properly belongs to the Board of Supervisors of Franklin County and certain other purposes in the County Legislature. In a message which I communicated to the Assembly on the 11th inst., in returning a bill without my signature, I stated my intention to withhold my sanction to special legislation in cases covered by general laws, pressed heavily upon the valuable time of public men, and increased largely the public expenses, and I suggested that special legislation in such cases be repealed in cases covered by general enactments.

I feel it to be my duty to take every proper opportunity to urge these views upon the consideration of the Legislature, and to do all in my power to check an evil which has grown to be one of great magnitude.

JOHN T. HOFFMAN.

The Governor gives his first reception to members of the Legislature this evening. S.

The motion was lost, and the Committee report was agreed to.

Mr. JACOBS offered a resolution that the Committee of the Assembly report no bills to the House, where the object to be secured can be obtained under the general laws of the State. Debate ensuing, the resolution went over.

Westward Ho!—The Excelsior Colony Association.

This Association held a meeting last evening at No. 68 East Broadway, at which perhaps a hundred members, and others interested, were present. The object is to associate themselves together in order to facilitate their transportation to some Territory, and there found a town or colony to be known as the "Excelsior Colony." The Association, it is intended, will consist of about 100 or 150 families, many of whom have already joined the Association. Each member or family is then to locate with the colony, upon a plantation lot of 40 acres, which cost, including the expenses of the organization, and each pays his own transportation. The lots are to be settled on are those of the Government located in Jefferson County, on the Lower Missouri, in Nebraska, about one hundred miles due west from the Missouri River, and on the line of the Atchison and Fort Kearney branch of the Pacific Railroad. The Association is intended to be made up chiefly of farmers, but including mechanics and tradesmen for the convenience of the colonists. The meeting last evening was the fourth held by the Association, and on Saturday evening next they meet again, at the same place. Its officers are LOUIS A. WALKER, President; SANFORD BROWN, Vice-President; BICKFORD J. ROBINSON, Secretary, and WILLIAM A. WALKER, Vice-President of the Atlantic Savings Bank, Treasurer. It is expected that the Association will be in a condition to start for their western home between the 1st and 10th of April next.

INTERNAL REVENUE CASE.

Suit Against a Collector for $100,000.

A case of considerable interest has for several days past been pending before the United States District Court at Trenton, N. J., the defendants being a Revenue Collector and his sureties, against whom an action was brought by the United States authorities for breach of bond, the loss to the Government by the alleged malfeasance of the Collector being $100,000. Mr. GEORGE W. THORNS is the gentleman against whom the charges were brought, and he, with his sureties, EDGAR B. WAKEMAN, R. MCLOUGHLIN, SAMUEL M. PRESTON, WILLIAM S. GILBERT and WILLIAM KINNEY were sued for the recovery of the sum of which the Government was defrauded during his term of office. Mr. THORNS was appointed Internal Revenue Collector of the Fifth District of New-Jersey in October, 1862, and went into office on the 1st of November following. During his incumbency, which was three months in duration, application was made to him for the removal of 50,000 gallons of whisky from two bonded warehouses in Jersey City, to California. He was required by an act of Congress to exact from the applicants for the removal, bonds for an amount double that of the tax on the spirits to be removed. This requirement of the law was alleged to have fraudulently and negligently met by accepting five worthless and spurious bonds, and that the whisky was then permitted to be removed without payment of the special tax. The whisky never reached California, and the tax was never paid. The names alone of the sureties to the bond upon which the whisky tax was obtained, were to be found, the individuals themselves and their worldly possessions were things that Deputy-Marshal BENJAMIN could not discover, and it is therefore suspected that they were "men of straw," called into existence for the purpose of defrauding the Government. The names are Harry Pomeroy, H. Wilkins, E. Bohn, James Rooter, James Marquard, Frank Walter, MAX HOBE, James Bradbury, Martin Franz, Chas. Kearnick and George Lardener. No address is given with either of the names, and when the writs which were issued against them was returned, Collector THORNS replied that he knew nothing about them, nor how he came by the bonds. It appears from his own testimony, that the duty of looking after the sufficiency of the sureties interested to a clerk, named GARDINER, who was about 19 years of age, and to whom the salary of $600 a year was paid. Upon this fabulous stipend the boy was expected to develop a comprehension of the value of bonds to the amount of hundreds of thousands yearly, to watch over the most weighty business of one of the first Revenue offices in the United States, and to exhibit in all these delicate and perplexing duties an incorruptible integrity. THORNS testified that he knew nothing about GARDINER, but he came recommended as "a good competent boy." The time of the Collector was occupied "in answering letters and exercising a general superintendence over the office;" he "knew nothing about any bonds received while he was in office;" he once "signed a permit for $50,000 worth of whisky to go out of his possession without reading the bonds, because, as he said, he had not time to read them, and he never looked at the names of sureties." He testified that he told GARDINER to look after the "bond business, for he knew nothing about it," but Mr. WALLIS, his predecessor in the office, said on oath that he had warned him to pay particular attention to them. GARDINER, to whom THORNS said he had intrusted the "bond business," testified that it was no part of his business to look after the value of the sureties; and that, moreover, in the case of these fraudulent bonds, the permits for transportation were granted before the bonds came into his hands.

Mr. JOHN R. WILLIAMS, an Ex-Inspector of Revenue, swore that he saw a man named COHEN at THORNS's office while the latter was Collector; that he had been informed that COHEN had purchased a large amount of whisky in New-York for transportation to the Fifth District of New-Jersey, and that he told Mr. THORNS to look out for the man, as there could be no business for such an amount in the Fifth District, and fraud was probably contemplated. This witness also testified to certain suspected transactions between THORNS and a man named ELLIS, who carried on a distillery in Jersey City, capable of turning out 5,000 gallons a day. The distillery was seized, but THORNS recommended that the distiller should be let off on the payment of a writing fine.

A Mr. RICHARDS, who is connected with the Internal Revenue Office at Washington, in preparing regulations for the officers of the revenue, testified that two of the transportation bonds, one of which was for more than half the whole amount, was not made out in the legal form, as they allowed six months to intervene before the Collector receiving bonded whisky was required to transmit his certificate of its receipt to the Collector from whose district it came, whereas the law requires that only thirty days shall elapse before such receipt is given. Directions given to Collectors, instructing them how to proceed in case where they were not personally cognizant of the sufficiency of the sureties, had also said to have been violated.

District-Attorney KEARNY summed up for the prosecution, and Messrs. J. W. SCUDDER and B. WILLIAMSON for the defendants.

The charge to the jury was delivered by Judge FIELD yesterday. He charged strongly against the defendant, and stated the importance of the decision in this case to govern the disposition of future cases.

THE LAFON TRAGEDY.

Trial, Conviction and Sentence of the Prisoner.

The last scene of a very sad and tragic life-drama was yesterday enacted in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Essex County, New-Jersey, the sentencing of THOMAS LAFON, Jr., a youth of 20, for the manslaughter of JOSEPH HERRING, a young German, 18 years of age. The condemned is the son of one of the most highly respected citizens of Newark, Dr. THOMAS LAFON, who resides at No. 8 Cedar-street, Newark. Young LAFON is an intelligent-looking youth, with a prepossessing face and address, and is a student of Oberlin College, from which he was absent on vacation when the dreadful occurrence took place, which, from the long train of calamities and evils with which it is fraught, may be regarded as one of the most untoward events that have happened in Newark. The family of LAFON is widely known, and his trial excited the most intense interest, the Court-room being constantly crowded to its utmost capacity. The circumstances of the case are as follows: On the morning of the 8th of December, JOSEPH LAFON, a young brother of THOMAS, was engaged in shoveling snow in front of his father's house. At this time THOMAS LAFON was in the front parlor watching his brother. A butcher's covered wagon, driven by JOSEPH HERRING, passed at this moment, and the young LAFON, in boyish sport, threw some snow into HERRING's wagon with his shovel. HERRING became enraged at this, and exclaimed, "D—n you, if you throw any more show I'll break your head;" to which the boy replied, "No you won't!"—this is the only expression there is evidence of his having made use of. It has been stated that he threw some more snow, but of this there appears to be insufficient proof. HERRING drove to the corner, hitched his horse, then returning, rushed at the boy, made an ineffectual blow, and closed with him. As he was a powerful, muscular young fellow, he soon succeeded in overpowering the boy, and commenced dealing him heavy and quickly-repeated blows on the face and body. At this juncture, THOMAS LAFON, who had left the window when the snow was thrown, not deeming it a matter of any moment, returned and beheld the situation of his brother, ran out to his assistance bare-headed, in his slippers. Catching up the shovel near the blade, he began to use the handle of it pretty freely upon the body of his brother's assailant, who, rising at the third blow, received it on the side of the head, immediately above the ear, at the point where the skull is thinnest, and fell backward groaning. LAFON terrified at what he had done, ran into the house, up the stairs, and excitedly told his mother what had occurred, and asked her to assist him. He then rushed out again, and his mother coming down, met him at the threshold leading HERRING in. She directed her son to take HERRING into the basement, as the upper part of the house was being swept and was cold. There the sufferer's wounds were washed and he carefully attended to by the partner of Dr. LAFON, Dr. DEHON, Dr. LAFON being absent. Though HERRING was only a little dizzy at the time, so that it was judged expedient to send him home, HERRING died six days afterward from the effect of this unlucky blow.

The unhappy author of his death was arrested, and after a trial lasting four days, was convicted of manslaughter. The counsel for the prisoner, Messrs. CORTLANDT PARKER and J. F. BRADLEY, argued the case in an able and exhaustive manner, and made eloquent appeals to the jury in his behalf. The defence claimed that in rescuing his brother, THOMAS LAFON had a right to use a certain amount of force, provided that amount did not exceed lawful bounds; that the peril to the younger LAFON was very great; as he was completely in the power of an enraged man, with the whole strength of whose arm blows were being rained upon his defenceless face and body; and that HERRING's death was not the result of a wilful intent to kill, but an accident occasioned by striking his head too suddenly. The jury returned homicide by manslaughter, and this verdict was very strongly urged upon the jury as the only probable one they could accept. Much stress was laid upon the pardonable warmth of a brother's feelings at such a critical moment, and total absence of premeditation. The prosecution was ably conducted by Mr. TREWORTH, who is a fluent and eloquent speaker. The jury, after being out three hours, found the prisoner guilty of manslaughter, but very earnestly recommended him to the mercy of the Court. Mr. O. PARKER, counsel for the prisoner, then moved for a new trial, and at 10 o'clock yesterday morning was fired for the hearing of the argument upon this point. Before the appointed hour arrived the Court-room was packed with an anxious gathering of all classes. Many of the wealthiest and most respectable people in Newark and vicinity were present; among them ladies beautifully and fashionably dressed. Mixed with these were those observed smokers, and by far the larger class, poorly attired, with none of the evidences of prosperity or wealth about them; and among them a great many Germans, who manifested a feeling of hatred toward the prisoner and those in sympathy with him. In fact, the remarks of the Philadelphia journals, which have come with particular severity against the accused, had been received by them with applause, which, however, was promptly checked. This feeling of bitterness toward the prisoner and his family has gradually intensified and increased, aided no doubt by the malevolent efforts of ill-disposed and malicious persons, originated partly from the difference in social position of the accused and the deceased, which engendered a suspicion common to vulgar minds that justice would not be so blind or impartial as she should be, but would favor the side of the rich, and partly, so far as the deceased being a German, from the fact of the deceased being a country man. This sentiment of hostility caused the friends of the deceased to regard the trial as a direct issue between them and the wealthier class, whom they suppose to be friendly to the prisoner. Mr. BRADLEY opened the argument in behalf of the prisoner on Saturday last he had not seen a printed copy of the charges. He had since examined it with more attention. In the first place it entirely overrules the ground of misadventure, which was one of the principal grounds of defence. He proceeded to read from the charge as printed in the papers; in which it says, after discussing the question of misadventure, "Obviously the defendant is not to be excused on that ground." He did not see that the matter had been fully and fairly discussed. A master in correcting his servant meant bodily harm, yet he should not be held responsible if a death followed from misadventure. He cited several instances of death from misadventure. He contended his theory was sustained by Lord HALE and other authorities.

In reply, Mr. TREWORTH said it seemed to him as if counsel for defendant wanted to have the case tried over again, and the defendant acquitted. He never knew, in a case which had excited so much interest, less said of a general nature in a charge than had been done in this case. It only contained the stern truths of the law.

After some further remarks, Judge DEFUS desired the prisoner to stand up, and, amid the hush of the densely packed Court-room, said that pity for the youth of the prisoner and regard for his family restrained the Court from visiting him with the heaviest penalties of the law for manslaughter; and that, therefore, he should sentence him to one year in the State Prison and to pay $500 fine. As soon as the sentence was passed audible tokens of dissatisfaction were expressed by a portion of the spectators, which, however, were quickly silenced, and the greatest decorum of the spectators was afterward displayed.

The prisoner seemed rather relieved than otherwise at the announcement of his sentence, but his sister bowed her head and seemed to be weeping bitterly, and his father and little brother seemed much moved.

The Rogers Murder.

It will be seen by our law reports that the Logan habeas corpus case came up again yesterday, and that Judge BARNARD decided, among other things, that there is no evidence implicating JAMES LOGAN No. 1 in the crime, and accordingly ordered him to be discharged upon his own recognizance in $1,000 for his appearance if wanted. As a consequence of this decision, a blank printed form of a recognizance was sent to the Fifteenth Precinct Station-house for LOGAN to sign, whereupon he was to be discharged. The blank was taken to LOGAN, and its purport explained. The blanks "and things" he perused, looked at the document doubtfully, and finally refused to sign it. He said he did not know what it was, and would sign nothing unless advised by counsel. This advice does not appear to have been given, for up to a late hour last night the blank was still unsigned, and he still occupied the cell where he has rotted for the last five weeks. The days of his imprisonment are however drawing to a close, as he will probably be informed to-day that no damage will ensue from his executing the recognizance, and the document being signed, he will be set at liberty. JAMES LOGAN No. 2 is still in jail, and will remain in custody, and hence there has been no change whatever in the status of the Rogers case.

Trichinosis.

The sailor HERMAN, one of the eight persons suffering from trichinosis, caused by eating diseased pork, as reported in the TIMES yesterday, is now at the Brooklyn City Hospital, and is in a fair way of recovery. Yesterday Dr. JAS. G. GREGORY, of the Hospital, diagnosticated the case, removed a portion of the muscle from the patient's arm, and submitted it to a microscopic examination, which revealed the presence and presence of the parasites, or trichinæ spirales, though in an incysted state. When they reach this condition, the trichinæ are no longer capable of doing harm, as they lie perfectly dormant and cease to propagate. The two patients in the New-York Hospital are also recovering.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

New-York.

JOHN KOHTMAN, No. 69½ Bowery, yesterday caused the arrest of RICHARD MATHES, who, he alleges, attacked him on the corner of Catharine and Henry streets, and attempted to steal his watch.
